Willkie Off In Fighting Mood on Trip To 18 States

Admitting Difference, Martin Says House G. O. P. Will Aid Him as President

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Aboard Willkie Special, En Route to Chicago, Sept. 12.—Wendell L. Willkie set forth tonight in quest of his first public office—the Presidency of the United States.

In a fighting mood, the Republican nominee left Rushville, Ind., at 11:30 p. m., on the most ambitious campaign trip in American political history, a 15-day, 7,200-mile swing over the plains, deserts and mountains of 18 States that may very well make or break him in his drive for the White House.

The candidate's departure followed by only a few hours a challenging reply to jibes by Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn that Willkie and Republican leaders in Congress are not working in harmony.

And thrown out, also, were Willkie's own jibes at Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York who, in a broadcast address tonight, supported President Roosevelt for reelection.

Martin Replies to Flynn

"So Fiorello, that paragon of virtue," Willkie said, "Jimmy Walker and Ed Flynn now join hands with Frank Hague, that great lover of civil liberties, and Ed Kelly, boss of the sewer gang."

The reply to Flynn came from G. O. P. National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., House minority leader, who, along with Senator Charles McNary, Vice Presidential nominee, and Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, conferred with Willkie at Indianapolis today, chiefly, McNary said, on the standard bearer's trip.

Flynn had cited Willkie's opposition to the Fish amendment to the conscription bill, which Martin had supported.

Martin declared today:

"We may differ from Mr. Willkie on an amendment, but I think the country wants Congress to do some

Rumored Falkland Naval Bases Deal Untrue, Says Hull

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday characterized as false propaganda Rome reports that the United States is seeking bases from Great Britain in the Falkland Islands, off Argentina.

Some kinds of propaganda are based on half truths, which is worse than no truth at all, the Secretary said. This item, however, had not a vestige of truth as a basis, he said.

The State Department apparently felt that the tale circulated from Rome was calculated to injure relations between the United States and Argentina.

The Gallup Poll

64% of Labor Now Backs Roosevelt

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 12.—Franklin D. Roosevelt is the Presidential choice at this time of a large majority of labor union members polled throughout the country, but there has been a sharp drop in his popularity among labor union groups since 1936.

The poll, conducted by the Institute, reached a cross-section of labor union members throughout the country, putting this question to them:

If the Presidential election were held today, would you vote for Roosevelt or Willkie?"

Each voter was also asked how he voted in 1936. A comparison follows:

Labor Union Members
For Roosevelt	80%
For Landon	20
Today
For Roosevelt	64%
For Willkie	36

Approximately one in every eight (12 per cent) said he was undecided at this time.

The greatest defection from the New Deal has come in the ranks of the A. F. of L., the poll indicates. Although John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. has been critical of the Administration and opposed a third term, the C. I. O. members reached in the survey were more for Roosevelt than the A. F. of L. members.

	Roosevelt	Willkie
A. F. L. Members	62%	38%
C. I. O. Members	75	25

A comparison with the 1936 vote shows an 18-point drop in Roosevelt's strength among A. F. of L. members included in the poll, and a drop of only 10 points among C. I. O. members.

It must be remember that the poll results reflect sentiment only as of today. The Willkie campaign has not yet swung into full action, and, in addition, future events in Europe may operate to change opinion one way or the other.

It is apparent at this writing, however, that Roosevelt still retains much of his strength with the laboring classes. In spite of the defection since 1936.

One of Willkie's main problems is how to increase the Republican vote not only in the labor union groups, but in the lower and middle income levels generally.

A recent Institute study of political sentiment by income groups indicates that whereas Willkie leads Roosevelt by a large margin in the upper income level, he trails far behind in the lower level.

Nazi Time Bomb Perils London's St. Paul's

London, Sept. 12.—Historic St. Paul's Cathedral, largest in London, last night was imperiled by a Nazi time bomb. A "suicide squad" piled sandbags around the bomb to protect the ancient building.

British Bombers Attack Convoys In Channel, Set Some Ships Afire

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Sept. 13.—German raiders bucking terrific antiaircraft fire stabbed at London repeatedly last night and early today, dropping high explosives and fire bombs, some of which crashed in the central area.

But the heavy barrage erected over the city apparently succeeded as on the previous night in blunting the main force of the attacks. Time and again mass formations of planes on meeting the curtain of bursting shrapnel turned away from the city to loose their bombs on London's outskirts.

British offensive forces, meanwhile, were busy early yesterday raiding and wrecking areas in Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen as well as Nazi invasion bases on the coast of France. Their raids constituted one of the greatest allied offensive actions of the war.

Raid Lasts 8½ Hours

The all-clear signal sounded in London at 5:43 a. m. ending a raid of 8 hours and 32 minutes duration. It had begun at 9:11 p. m.

There were no reports of extensive damage in London immediately after the raid. The Midlands had their biggest raid of the war in the night, but there also, no heavy damage was reported immediately.

Just after 3 a. m., the most determined thrusts of the night were made against mid-London. Showers of heavy bombs and incendiaries rained down in two directions, and the antiaircraft racket was deafening.

With almost clock-like precision many of the raids came at 15-minute intervals. The sound of planes nearing the city immediately brought the violent reaction of ground guns tossing tons of shells into the murky sky.

"Archies" Hurl Tons of Steel

A hail of antiaircraft shrapnel fell on rooftops and streets. Police and air-raid wardens remained above ground during this inferno of firing to report fires and locate any delayed-action bombs that fell.

They roped off streets where powerful explosions ripped huge craters in the pavements and notified firemen where incendiary blazes began.

Now and then a house or building in some districts of the city collapsed like an aspirin tossed into a glass of water. The ground trembled both with German bombs and the slamming of the "Archie" defenders.

Some casualties were reported but the attacks were believed less damaging than any night since the heavy raiding began last Saturday.

After each German attack subsided the streets became ominously quiet.

Victories Claimed For Italian Subs In the Atlantic

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 12.—Unofficial reports circulated in Rome tonight that the Italians had begun their long-expected attack on Egypt.

A Fascist authority said he had heard such rumors but was unable to confirm them. It was indicated, however, that some announcement might come tomorrow.

Air attacks on Egypt, a British ally, and the Sudan have been intensified in the last few days.

Giovanni Ansaldo, an authoritative editor, spoke cryptically today of a telegram from Alexandria which would be a greater bombshell to Britain than a German bomb. What that telegram might contain, he said, "we will not say but you will guess it."

Meanwhile Italy declared that her submarine arm had reached into the Atlantic Ocean to prey on British shipping, crediting one boat with sinking 27,000 tons in a single voyage beyond the Strait of Gibraltar.

The high command also claimed that in a raid on Aden, British base at the entrance to the Red Sea, two British destroyers were sunk by air bombing September 1 and 2.

Pershing to Mark 80th Birthday With Radio Talk

At 7:30 a. m. today Gen. John J. Pershing will stand in front of a mirror in his apartment at the Carlton Hotel stropping an old-fashioned straight razor. He will be looking forward to as crowded a day as ever filled the eightieth birthday anniversary of any man.

After shaving—the General always shaves himself—he will breakfast in his living room, read the papers and write letters until noon.

This afternoon he will go to his War Department office where he will meet the press at 3:30 p. m. and deliver a Nation-wide broadcast at 4:30 p. m. At home his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. France W. Pershing, will be present for a quiet family dinner.

King George sent a cable of congratulation to General Pershing yesterday—one day ahead of time. The King's message read:

"I send you my warmest congratulations on your eightieth birthday, together with the best wishes of the people of this country where you will always be held in affectionate esteem as a distinguished leader and comrade-in-arms during the Great War."

'All Bremen Is on Fire—What A Fire!' Exclaims R. A. F. Pilot

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Sept. 12.—Swarming over the Third Reich and its occupied territories to strike smashing blows against Germany, R. A. F. bombers last night blasted at Hamburg, for four hours, pounded Bremen and Brussels and visited Berlin for an hour and a half.

They ravaged military objectives down the Rhine Valley, airdromes in the heart of the Reich and shipping concentrations on the coast.

The effective part in the operations taken by Britain's allies was emphasized by the work of the Czech bombing squadron which had been formed here and which carried out the raid on the railroads and factories of Brussels. After the recent spectacular successes of a Polish fighter squadron in the defense of Britain and a French bomber and reconnaissance units in the middle east, the Czech squadron takes its place in the progressive restoration of the "Allied Front" in the war against Nazism.

"Bremen's on fire—and what a fire," one of the pilots exclaimed on his return from a raid on that port, which lasted nearly two hours. Great fires were started by the first attackers and spread in a tornado of flames through the heart of the dock yards and railroad sections of the town.

Direct hits were registered on the main buildings and machine shops of the Deutsche Schiff and Maschinenbau Shipbuilding Co., while a fury of flames swept through the adjoining docks.

One aircraft dropped a line of bombs parallel with the main fitting out shops, which were burning so fiercely after the first attack that

Four Who 'Beat' Slot Machines With Jimmy Held

Slot machines, ofttimes termed one-armed bandits, will yield their hoards of silver to a properly applied "jimmy," two men and two women told Washington police authorities yesterday. They exhibited more than $200 from the jackpots of a North Beach, Md., amusement center, and boasted of similar hauls "all over the country."

The recipe for beating the slot machines involves some little danger, however, as they were detected at the North Beach place and had two bullet holes in the rear of their car, said to have been fired by "bouncers" as they fled with the coin.

The quartet was arrested when police here responded to a lookout from Marlboro authorities stating that they were wanted for "robbery at North Beach." But then no formal complaint was made at North Beach and Washington's acting Chief of Detectives Ira E. Keck explained that he believed the lookout was a request telephoned to Marlboro on the spur of the moment by the "bouncers." The four were held here for fingerprinting.

France Spurns Axis Demands

By the Associated Press

The French government was reported reliably last night to have turned down major demands from both Germany and Italy.

In diplomatic quarters it was believed the future of the Petain government and unoccupied France might be vitally affected.

The Italians were said to have insisted on demobilization of all French troops in North Africa, estimated at about 200,000, fearing that a revolt against the Petain regime might throw large reinforcements to the British forces in that region.

Germany, these sources said, called on the Petain government to surrender 58 per cent of the livestock in unoccupied France. The German plan was said to have been to send the livestock to Germany and slaughter it for meat.

The Petain government, faced with a food problem of its own in the unoccupied region and fearing that each concession would lead to still another demand, was understood to have rejected both the German and Italian proposals.

Whether negotiations were still under way on a more modest basis was not clear in the reports here but some diplomatic sources forecast increased difficulties for the present Vichy government.

The Petain government might be forced out, one well-informed source

Final Senate Draft Approval Likely Today

Conference Report Broadens Industry Conscription Clause

Swift Senate approval today of the conscription bill conference report appeared assured last night, with final enactment tomorrow of the country's first peace-time draft legislation expected.

Initial steps looking toward an organized effort to reject the conferees' proposals for composing House and Senate differences on the measure appeared to have been halted by Senators still opposed to some of the provisions.

As a result, no further difficulties are expected for the bill that calls for registration of some 16,500,000 Americans, 21 to 35 years of age, as a reservoir from which the military services will be built up. A year of military training and service anywhere in the Western Hemisphere or in United States possessions face those registrants selected.

Provision Broadened

The House and Senate conferees yesterday made one more change in their report before filing it with the Senate.

Language of the "draft industry" provision was modified to permit the Government to commandeer non-cooperating plants for defense work with no greater danger facing the Nation than exists today.

The language adopted Wednesday empowered the President to commandeer plants where no agreement could be reached with the ownership over Government contracts only "if the public danger is immediate, imminent and impending."

The conferees decided yesterday, however, that the President should

125 Injured In Factory Busy on U. S. Army Orders

Damage to N. J. Plant Estimated At $1,000,000; Parts Of 3 States Shaken

By the Associated Press

Kenvil, N. J., Sept. 12.—A series of explosions in buildings where eight tons of explosives were being processed today virtually demolished the Hercules Powder Co. plant here, killing at least 29, injuring 125 and rocking the countryside for 125 miles around.

William C. Hunt, of Wilmington, Del., in charge of the company's explosive department, estimated damage to the plant amounted to "at least $1,000,000."

Eight tons of powder blew up in two mighty blasts, followed by a succession of smaller explosions.

Hunt said that besides the 29 known dead 25 others could not be accounted for.

"Apparently a fire started, followed by a series of explosions which spread to adjoining buildings, 15 or 20 of which were demolished over a half-mile square area."

Started in Solvent Tanks

He added that the fire apparently started in the solvent recovery tanks "where 16,000 pounds of smokeless powder were being processed."

"There were probably 75 men working in the area where the major explosions occurred," he added. He said he was unable to estimate the number of men at work in the building where the fire started.

"The company," Hunt continued, "is at a loss to explain the cause of the fire and the explosions. The buildings in which the powder was located were separated by substantial brick walls and there was a sprinkler system in all of them.

"We thought all safeguards possible to prevent such an occurrence had been taken. We have no suspicions of any sabotage."

Plot Story Recalled

Conqueror Takes Field

Marshal von Brauchitsch Visits German Troops Along Channel

By International News Service

Berlin, Sept. 12.—Reichsmarshal von Brauchitsch, supreme commander of the German army, tonight was revealed to be "inspecting troops" in northwest France opposite England.

Announcement that the "conquering hero" of the Polish, Lowlands and French campaigns had gone to the areas near the French coast of the English Channel was deemed highly significant in Berlin.

It was the first time Von Brauchitsch officially was divudged to be in that vital zone from which many believe the long-expected attempt to invade the British Isles may be begun.

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 12.—An army of 2,000,000 rimmed Britain's mist-shrouded coastline and hundreds of air fields or likely landing spots tonight in expectation of an imminent Nazi invasion.

Intelligence officers of all three services confirmed Prime Minister Churchill's warning yesterday that a German attempt was considered a possibility perhaps in a week's time, and that Nazi power barges and other ships were concentrated from Norway to southern France along the continental coast opposite England.

Four of five neutral military observers here also believed Germany will make the long-awaited drive within ten days.

All five, however, thought Britain was strong enough to throw off any attacking force.

Lock on Testing Laboratory Costs District $15,000 a Year

By Howard F. Wentworth

A three line proviso, attached to the District of Columbia appropriation bill in 1933, has cost the city an average of $15,000 a year ever since, it was learned yesterday.

While municipal heads literally beg for additional funds to operate various departments efficiently, they have been forced to abide by a Congressional edict which has cost the city better than $90,000 in 6½ years.

At Second and Bryant streets northwest, just behind the ball park, is a two-story brick building, completed in 1931 at a cost of $100,000. It is known as the District Testing Laboratory and for two years after its completion was used to test construction materials.

But since 1933, this laboratory, described as one of the finest in the country, has remained under lock and key. Its elaborate equipment has been greased, wrapped up and shelved. District officials have been forbidden to utilize its facilities and all testing work has been taken over by the Bureau of Standards.

Senator Overton (Democrat, of Louisiana), chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee, said yesterday his group had several times eliminated the proviso, but it had, on each occasion, been reinstated by the House.

"The House felt," he said, "that the testing work could be more efficiently conducted by the Bureau of Standards. We, however, were managing editor, the United Press recalled.

[Exposing an alleged Nazi plot for making war and conducting sabotage against the United States, Paynter told of a "meeting in which plans to dynamite the Hercules Powder Co. were discussed."

[He charged that a representative of the German government, "who has been . . . active . . . in plotting sabotage designed to shed American blood," attended the session, at which United States counterespionage agents also were present.]

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, said after a visit to the scene that the Dies Committee, of which he is a member, would "investigate the group who are holding employment in the plant."

Thomas said the inquiry would include employes of all plants "that have defense contracts."

Hunt said the company would not be able to publish the names of the dead until all had been identified. He estimated that about 50,000 pounds of powder were destroyed.

No Women Employed

The building in which disaster struck was built only recently to handle national defense contracts. The plant sprawls over 2,000 acres, about a mile off Route 6. It was established in 1876. No women were employed there.

Earlier Police Chief Harry Jenkins quoted County Physician Raymond Mutchler that the tentative death toll was 20. Other estimates ran as high as 50. The number of persons at work in the plant at the time of the explosions could not be immediately ascertained.

The 400-acre smokeless powder manufacturing plant was engaged on numerous national defense contracts. The company had received $40,000,000 in contracts from the Federal Government in the last three months.

Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Newark sent agents to the scene and Naval officials at New York said an investigation would be launched because a Naval ammunition depot is at Lake Denmark, seven miles away. Picatinny Army arsenal is eight miles away.

The company has been working on $2,800,000 in U. S. Army orders for explosives and powder. It was also reported to be manufacturing explosives for the British.

In addition to current Army orders, Hercules had received a contract for $20,000,000 for powder to be manufactured at a $26,000,000 plant, to be constructed at Radford, Va., with Government funds. However, the Radford plant is not scheduled for completion until the middle of 1941.

Today, in Washington, the Hercules Co. was announced as the winner of two new War Department contracts for smokeless powder. The orders totaled $545,000.

President Roosevelt asked the War Department and Red Cross today to rush relief facilities immediately.

Most of the injured were taken to the Dover Hospital at Dover, five miles away. Hospital attaches said they received 130 victims.

At least three of the injured died at the hospital.

The institution could not accommodate the rush of victims in its surgical rooms. Many were treated in hallways. Dover residents contributed blankets.

The terrific force of the concussions shattered windows and damaged furniture in homes of Kenvil, Dover and other nearby communities.

More Blasts Expected

Early estimates set the plant damage at $2,000,000.

State police and company officials cleared all persons from the huge plant enclosure as the inferno raged. They said "more explosions are expected at any minute."

The plant is 30 miles northwest of New York City metropolitan area, in a rural section. Kenvil's population is 900.

The blasts were so severe that they registered on the seismograph of Fordham University, New York. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., officials said the concussions were felt throughout Dutchess County, where President Roosevelt's home is, and Danbury, Conn., residents flooded police with queries of "where was the earthquake?"

State Police Capt. William Nichol reported 11 bodies were found before the property was cleared.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, superintendent of State police, said no cause had been fixed for the explosions, which started in the solvent recovery house, and that it was "too early" to consider the possibility of sabotage.

Chief Jenkins described the scene as "horrible." He reported seeing arms and legs which had been torn from bodies. He extinguished a man's burning body with a hand extinguisher.

A. S. Boyd, of the Boonton ambulance squad, said he saw "about 15 bodies in the first-aid building."

"The ruins were so hot rescuers were unable to search for bodies," he explained.

Cort Baker, 21, Teaneck, employed in the plant laundry about 1,500 feet from the solvent recovery house, said the blasts blew the roof off the laundry and shattered a wall.

"I was blown about 20 feet," he said, "and I was cut by flying glass. I made my way into the clear and all I saw was a scene of desolation."

Sam Olivo, 46, of Netcong, an employe in the dehydrating building, was "lifted five feet off the ground and before I knew it I was buried under debris.

"I dug my way out," he added, "and started running."

Like many others treated at Dover hospital, which was quickly filled with the wounded, was William Lewis, 22, of Wharton, who suffered from the concussion.

"All I know is that she blew," said Lewis. "Then I started running. I'm still in a daze."

Milton Miller, of Landing, was at work in a building near the solvent recovery structure when "something fell on me and a man ten feet away from me was flattened against a loading platform."

Clouds of smoke, dust and debris mingled with flames that shot many feet into the air.

Claude Van Fleet, 35, of Morristown, carpenter shop workman, said the concussion knocked him off his feet. He suffered a broken arm.

Roosevelt Told Of Midwest Gains

Chicago Speech Hinted as He Talks With Lucas

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Democratic National Committee yesterday redoubled efforts to check the Midwest boom for Wendell Willkie as the President stepped again into the political arena to receive campaign reports of Midwestern managers.

Speculation on a Chicago speech by the President was revived here following a White House conference with Senator Lucas, of Illinois, now directing Mr. Roosevelt's third-term drive in 13 Midwestern States.

Lucas, who came here following New York conferences with National Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn, returned to Chicago last night after reporting to the President that Roosevelt sentiment in his 13-State area "is on the upgrade."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, meanwhile was designated by Lucas to handle the labor end of the Midwestern campaign. Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee previously had been placed in charge of the farm-vote drive under Lucas.

While no further campaign speaking commitments have been made by the President, Democratic spokesmen declined to bar the possibility of a Chicago speech as other evidences pointed to a politically active October for Mr. Roosevelt.

Lucas said he told the President that a canvass of Democratic executives in his 13 States showed that Willkie's "former high peak in the Midwest has passed and he is now on the toboggan."

"I don't claim all of the States," Lucas told reporters. "But if the present trend continues we will win the great majority of them. We are close to it now, and I told Mr. Roosevelt that things are getting better."

If Republicans are attempting to steer the campaign away from the defense program to domestic issues, they apparently have succeeded in the Midwest, where Lucas said the farm and labor questions were the two most vital issues. Selection of Senator Thomas and Representative Jones to specialize on these was indicative of the importance attached to them.

Willkie "Talking Too Much"

Lucas declared Willkie is alienating much support in the West and among Republicans in Congress by "talking too much." Willkie recently declared against the Fish amendment delaying conscription, for which 140 House Republicans had voted.

But in the House, Representative Englebright (Republican), of California, minority whip, declared "Mr. Willkie's independence of thought and candor of speech is helping him with the people."

"He has made it clear from the start that he would run his own kind of campaign and I think the voters like it," said Englebright. "His belief that the public hasn't been fully informed and should be, and the very sincerity of such differences as he has with members of his own party in Congress, will win him friends, not lose them."

Other developments:

Nomination of Eugene Talmadge for a third term as Governor of Georgia was interpreted by some Republicans and conservative Democrats at the Capitol as the first Southern manifestation of anti-third term sentiment. Although Talmadge has pledged himself to support the Democratic ticket in November, friends said he was as personally opposed to a Roosevelt third term as he was formerly bitterly critical of the Roosevelt administration.

Johnson May Back Willkie

Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, who recently won renomination for the Senate by the largest vote of his career but has never committed himself to either Presidential candidate, was reported about to declare for Willkie and speak for him in California. Senator Johnson declined any comment.

Commenting on the President's Wednesday night speech to the teamsters' union, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor said it was "a fine and wonderful address," adding that "the President's assurances that our standards will be maintained will be appreciated throughout the land."

Powder Blast NumbedThem, Workmen Say

Dozens of Injured Stay on Job to Guard Against More Damage

By William Barret McGurn
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Kenvil, N. J., Sept. 12.—Men in the Hercules Powder plant who lived throughout the explosion this afternoon said their reaction during the seconds of the blast was not one of fright, but one of numbness.

They belived that for a few instants they were inside a gigantic vacuum, for houses more than a half mile away had window casings on the opposite side from the blast blown in out of the walls, apparently by a terrific rush of returning air.

Dozens of workmen who suffered lacerations and contusions during the blast sufficient to send them home under normal circumstances stayed hard at work around the plant during the afternoon, making emergency repairs that were necessary to prevent further damage. Some had unattended blood stains on the face, too busy since the blast to take care of them.

Carpenter Hurled 50 Feet

Arthur Morgan, 49, a carpenter in the plant, who was blown 50 feet through the air, dropping 20 feet to the ground, was hard at work with a crew of 50 other carpenters nailing tar paper over windows to protect the interiors in case of rain.

Helping him was Gus Schultz, 53, also a carpenter, who was half buried by falling sheet iron from the machine shop, 300 feet from the explosion.

Many of the survivors laughed as they discussed the disaster. Everywhere old timers repeated.

"This was the worst one I ever saw."

In the home of Plant Supervisor J. A. Struthers, a half mile from the scene of the explosion, a locked door was blown open. The lock was torn out of the door.

Dominick Ciarraffo, 18-year-old, who does odd jobs at the Picatinny arsenal, nine miles away, said the noise was so loud there that he thought the explosion was in the arsenal itself.

A. W. Streich, dynamite supervisor of the plant, who was uninjured although he was at his home 500 feet from the spot, said the noise was so loud he could not hear it.

"When you're that close you just don't hear it," he said. "Everything just went dark. I just went numb. I couldn't feel anything.

Homes Are Wrecked

His wife was taken to the hospital, her left eye cut by flying glass. Mrs. Streich was sitting in front of a window facing the scene of the explosion. Streich found three shafts of glass protruding, dagger fashion, from the kitchen wall.

In the Streich home and those beside it every room was a scene of destruction. Plaster was torn out of ceilings 6 feet across. Plaster of the walls bulged out a foot in places. Bottles were tossed from the medicine shelves. Doors were torn out of the walls in some places. The two-by-four private roof beam of a garage three-quarters of a mile away was split in two.

Cut on head, face and arm, one woman laughed:

"I just dripped blood from one end of the house to another."

Asked how she could laugh about it, she replied soberly:

"My husband is still living. That's all that matters."

Her house, she remarked, literally had been "knocked apart." The walls of her pantry were torn out on two sides.

Willkie Sets Out in Fighting Mood on Tour of 18 States

thinking of its own. That is what they expected when Congress stopped the move of Mr. Roosevelt to put a bunch of 'Charlie McCarthys' on the Supreme Court bench.

"Yes, we may differ, Mr. Flynn, on an amendment. This is still a free America and we want after next January to have a free Congress. You can rest assured that we will give President Willkie one hundred per cent cooperation and support in his program to free America from the chains of bureaucracy, to free the country from Communistic barnacles."

Not long before his team started, Willkie sat before a radio and heard LaGuardia's talk.

Chuckles at Speech

Willkie chuckled several times in the course of the speech. When it was over, referring to LaGuardia's charge that he was once a member of Tammany Hall, Willkie said:

"The amusing thing about that suggestion is that I ran as a county committeeman in order to vote for John Sheehy as district leader. When President Roosevelt, then Governor of New York, kicked out 'Tin Box' Tom Farley of the Walker regime, he turned to a man on whom all citizens could rely, and that man was John Sheehy.

"I voted for Sheehy for district leader, and Gov. Roosevelt then named him sheriff to replace Tin Box Farley."

Willkie apparently was expecting LaGuardia to come out for Roosevelt, for he had a secretary dig up a speech made by the New York Mayor on October 3, 1933, in which he lambasted Flynn, the New Deal campaign manager.

LaGuardia Words Recited

Willkie noted that LaGuardia, in his speech tonight, did not retract what he had to say about Flynn in 1933, which follows:

"Municipal corruption is like all other sordid crimes, strangely unoriginal. There is little originality in the official misconduct of our city government. I see very little difference in the New York of Tweed and that of John F. Curry, of Manhattan, and Ed Flynn, of the Bronx."

Willkie added his own postscript to this:

"Thus the forces of righteousness march on."

Earlier Willkie was much wrought up over President Roosevelt's promise in his speech last night to increase pensions at a time when the country's national debt is soaring, and this morning he issued a statement on the Chief Magistrate's address before the teamsters in Washington.

It said:

"I have never felt so encouraged about the outcome of the election as I did after listening to Mr. Roosevelt's speech.

"If the American people have any sense of realism of the condition of the world in which they are living, they will reject overwhelmingly a President who preaches such class-conscious and economic sabotage doctrines as were preached last night.

"The kindest words which can be applied to the President's speech are that he does not understand the laws of economics, government finance or the forces at work in the world today.

"The United States cannot but fail in the present world struggle under such leadership—it is the same doctrine which Blum of France taught.

69 Speeches Scheduled

Willkie is scheduled to make 69 speeches on this Western swing. He will deliver them in the same voice he used at Elwood, with all its Hoosier imperfections. To try to change now, he feels, would smack of the "phony," and so he probably will continue saying "plitical" and "nited-States."

His first four speeches tomorrow in Chicago, illustrate his aggressive spirit. He is invading the stronghold of the Kelly-Nash machine, which played a big part in the draft-Roosevelt movement at Chicago and which is now working overtime to keep him out of the White House.

He fully expects to be heckled because he is going before workmen who are largely C. I. O. and pro-Roosevelt. He will address one crowd down in the stockyards, another at a steel mill, another in a colored baseball park, and a fourth at an electrical plant in Cicero.

Talk that he has been "slipping" since his dramatic nomination in Philadelphia is no secret to Willkie. He talks about it frankly.

How, he asks, can it be said that his campaign is slipping when it hasn't even started? He says that his first "real" campaign speech will be delivered Monday at Coffeyville, Kans., where he once taught school. It will be broadcast by the Columbia, National and Mutual systems.

In this speech he will delineate the differences between his own political philosophy and that of the New Deal. The following day, at Amarillo, Tex., he will let fly with his first major attack on President Roosevelt's attempt to break with tradition in seeking a third term.

The 12-car special train on which Willkie is heading into the West, is, in the words of a Pennsylvania yard foreman, "really something."

Red Cross Slates Demonstration At Housewarming

Actual production of garments and surgical dressings for European war relief will be demonstrated at the District Red Cross roll call housewarming program to be given between 4:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. today at the Walsh mansion, 2020 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Exhibitions of Braille, first aid, home hygiene and care of the sick likewise will be featured, General Chairman Edgar Morris announced.

The District Chapter announced receipt of an annonymous gift of $3,111.14 for British war relief and shipment to England of 23 packing cases of surgical dressings and knitted and sewed garments made by chapter volunteers.

Starting Monday, the sewing rooms in Linthicum Hall, 3116 O street northwest, will be reopened for Red Cross war relief production.

LaGuardia AnnouncesHe's For Roosevelt

Reveals Sen. Norris As Head of Third-Term Independent Group

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 12.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia announced his support of President Roosevelt tonight and said Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, would serve as honorary chairman of "an independent committee for Roosevelt."

The mayor disclosed his position over N. B. C.-WEAF, the time for which was paid for by the Democratic National Committee. A consistent supporter of New Deal policies, LaGuardia recently was appointed by the President as chairman of the United States section of the joint American-Canadian defense board.

Norris, termed by LaGuardia "the outstanding leader of all of us independents and progressives," was chairman of the "National Progressive League for Roosevelt as President" in Mr. Roosevelt's first campaign eight years ago.

"I belong to no party," said Mayor LaGuardia, who was elected to Congress in the past as both a Republican and a Socialist. "I do not like politicians. I want nothing from either party. I do love my country. I am concerned and worried over world conditions and our relations to them.

I know that President Roosevelt's foreign policy and his preparedness plan are the only hope of keeping our country out of war. I enthusiastically approve of the social welfare program of the New Deal. I prefer Roosevelt with his known faults to Mr. Willkie with his unknown virtues."

La Guardia added that Government administration was "a science: It cannot be learned overnight. In these perilous times, there can be no time lost in getting 'the feel of things' by a new administration or 'time out' for breaking in a new Cabinet."

"I do not undervalue President Roosevelt's opponent," the mayor continued. "He is a brilliant executive of a utility holding company."

LaGuardia said Willkie had had "no experience in government" but "considerable experience in politics," and added that he "served his apprenticeship in the Democratic machine of Ohio and obtained his master's degree in Tammany Hall when he was handed a certificate of election to the Tammany county committee."

"Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "entered politics as a Democrat and not as a Tammanyite. He won his spurs as a member of the New York State Senate by fighting Tammany Hall.

"Roosevelt has regenerated our country. Roosevelt has made America the hope of the world. That is why I am for President Roosevelt."

Case sales for the period this year were 16,889 against 19,271 a year ago.

U. S. Bar Refuses 3d-Term Stand

Association Tables All Resolutions By Vote of 217 to 126

Philadelphia, Sept. 12 (AP).—The American Bar Association sidestepped the Presidential third term controversy at a spirited session of its 63rd annual convention today and refused to commit itself on President Roosevelt's ambitions for another four years in the White House.

By a vote of 217 to 126, the association tabled all resolutions dealing with Presidential terms, including a recommendation for a single six-year term.

Members avoided specifically a show of sentiment on a resolution to "unqualifiedly condemn the seeking of a third term by Franklin Delano Roosevelt and his friends as contrary to the teachings and example of the founding fathers of the republic and subversive to the principles upon which it is established."

Called "Impertinent"

The Academy of Music Hall was electric with excitement as this resolution was read to the convention delegates. Clarence N. Goodwin, of Washington, moved that the proposal be sidetracked "as scandalous and impertinent."

After the vote, Edward E. C. Bailly, of New York, co-sponsor of the resolution, said:

"I achieved my purpose. It was an attempt to educate the lawyers of America with regard to their own government."

The association's house of delegates approved a report declaring that "retrogressive relaxation of labor standards" should not accompany production for national defense.

Summers Plan Approved

Other recommendations were for:

Establishment of Government-supervised camps, providing medical attention, to care for the "menacing numbers" of migratory workers.

Civil Service examinations for trial examiners of the National Labor Relations Board.

The convention's general session approved a resolution introduced by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee recommending that the House be empowered to cite a Federal judge for misconduct and authorize other Federal judges, instead of the Senate, to try him.

"Senators won't try a District judge," Representative Sumner (Democrat), of Texas asserted. "The common sense of the Nation is forcing us away from impeachment as the only way of getting a crooked judge off the bench."

Appointment of a bar association committee to cooperate with the Government in the national defense program was authorized in another resolution.

Col. Battle Says Unmarked Police Cars Cut Crashes

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Although State Police wish to avoid "anything that represents a trap" for drivers, Motor Vehicle Director Marion Battle said he believed the use of some unmarked police cars on highways would mean a reduction in accidents.

Marking police cars engaged in safety work, he said, was equivalent to "putting a bell on a cat that you want to use as a rat catcher."

Col. Battle said he believed the best plan, when cars were available, would be to have some white machines with police markings, some autos of standard color with police markings and some of standard color without police markings. Drivers of all would be kept in uniform.

"I feel we are justified in any change that will improve the safety of our roads, except, of course, in anything that resembles a trap," he said. "To prevent the appearance of a trap, we keep all police in uniform, whether they are riding in marked or unmarked cars."

Refugees Refused Entry to U. S. at Norfolk

FACE A SAD JOURNEY BACK—European refugees, whose attempts to reach South America have been futile because they lacked transit visas to the United States, line the rail of the steamer Quanza as she loaded on coal at Norfolk. Relatives and friends were within speaking distance of them on the pier, but immigration officers remained firm in refusing to permit any to land. The Portuguese steamer will sail back to Lisbon

Habeas Corpus Plea Filed by Belgians To Gain Release

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 12.—Habeas corpus proceedings brought by four of 89 European war refugees aboard the Portuguese steamer Quanza were halted by United States District Court Judge Luther B. Way this afternoon when he was advised that the State Department planned to inspect the ship.

Harry H. Holt, assistant district attorney, told he court that he understood A. R. Archibald, district director of the Immigration Service, had been ordered to conduct the inspection.

Judge Way then adjourned the court hearing until tomorrow. Capt. A. Herberts, of the Quanza, had been summoned to show cause why the four passengers should not be released.

Most of the refugees are Belgians en route to South America. They left Lisbon, Portugal, August 5, and were refused leave to come ashore at Vera Cruz, New York and Norfolk because of the lack of transit visas. They had expected to land briefly to book passage on South American vessels, but officials have ruled they did not have correct papers.

The Quanza tied up at Sewell's Point yesterday to load coal for the return trip to Lisbon and friends and relatives of the refugees instituted the court proceedings in the hope of obtaining permission for them to land.

La Follette Hits Profit Tax Bill As Inequitable

Harrison Reiterates Claim It Will Pass Senate; Up Today

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

A slashing assault on the excess-profits tax bill was delivered yesterday by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, on the eve of scheduled Senate consideration of the complex measure.

Disavowed by the Treasury Department, the proposed tax was wholeheartedly condemned by Senator La Follette in a minority report from the finance committee.

But Chairman Harrison of the committee — which concluded its extensive revision of the House proposals Wednesday with a 14 to 7 vote in favor of the new bill—reiterated his conviction that the measure would pass with little trouble. The majority report will be released today.

In order to speed action on the tax bill, the Senate agreed to meet at 11 a. m. today, an hour earlier than usual. Before the tax measure is to be brought up, the conference report on the conscription bill will be voted on; and there was some fear that extensive debate on this issue might delay the tax bill.

Substitute to Be Offered

Meanwhile, Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, last night introduced for himself and Senators Clark, of Missouri; Lee, of Oklahoma, and Miller, of Arkansas (Democrats), a proposal to remove Federal tax exemption from all future issues of Federal, State and municipal bonds. Senator Brown said a majority of the Finance Committee favored the amendment.

Senator La Follette said he intends to offer, as a substitute for the tax portions of the pending measure, a proposal running along the same lines as the excess-profits tax approved by the Senate last June but knocked out in conference.

While gross yield from the committee bill has been variously estimated at from $355,000,000 to $482,500,000 for 1940, Senator La Follette said his proposal would yield $475,000,000 without the 3.1 per cent increase in the normal corporation tax rate contained in the committee bill.

"Violates Sound Tax Theory"

Among other emendments to the taxx bill that will more or less delay its passage through the Senate is a proposal for the "drafting of capital" through forced loans, by Senator Lee. An amendment levying very high tax rates, up to 83 per cent, effective when the Nation is at war, will be offered by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, he said yesterday.

Asserting that the Finance Committee bill "violates sound tax theory," Senator La Follette declared in his minority report that the pending measure "is neither reasonable nor equitable." It gives to taxpaying corporations a "heads they win; tails the Treasury loses" alternative, he said.

The committee on taxation of the National Lawyers Guild issued a statement during the day calling the committee proposal "an abject surrender by Government to the demands of industry achieved by means of the sit-down strike against the rearmament program."

U. S. Gets 12 More Years to Collect Its $7,000,000

The Government Wednesday was granted 12 more years to collect nearly $7,000,000 of which it claims it was defrauded by a Swiss company which acted for two German corporations in the World War.

Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Court, extended the life of a judgment obtained by the Government against the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs de Metaux, when Francis J. McNamara, special assistant to the Attorney General, showed that only $60,000 has been collected because the firm has no assets in this country. McNamara said the Government has sued the Societe Suisse in Swiss courts.

In the World War this Government seized stock of the American Metal Co. alleged to have been owned by the German corporations, Metallgesellschaft and Metallbank. Later the Societe Suisse claimed that the stock was its property and collected $7,000,000 for them.

In 1927, Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller was convicted of conspiring with the Societe Suisse to defraud the Government. Similar charges against Harry M. Daugherty, former

Drive Begun to Aid British Red Cross

The Washington Committee, No. 2, of the British War Relief Society has launched a drive in cooperation with more than 100 similar committees throughout the country to raise funds for hospital equipment for the British Red Cross, it was announced yesterday.

Goal of the campaign is to supply sufficient funds to equip 10,000 hospital beds in Britain, according to Mrs. George Lloyd, local chairman. The sum of $40 is required to supply bedding and surgical appliances for one bed, she said.

Pointing out that many persons had volunteered to equip beds as individuals, the chairman said Washingtonians with this purpose in mind should contact Miss Violet Kelp, of 812 Fifteenth street north, west, committee treasurer.

D.C.-to-Dayton Air Permit Is Sought

Adjournment Set Sept. 28 By Democrats

No Recess, if Move Is Blocked, Leaders Warn Dissenters

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Democratic leaders yesterday set September 28 as their goal for adjournment of Congress.

This decision was made after President Roosevelt sent word that when pending legislation is completed and a final deficiency bill, estimated at more than a $1,000,000,000, is passed that he would have no more major suggestions to make at this session.

zNotice was served on Republican leaders that if their forces successfully resist adjournment, there would be no recess, but that Congress would remain in session throughout October and through the November elecetions. This notice also was served Democrats, who have demanded Congress remain on duty.

President Roosevelt, it was learned, informed his Congressional chieftains that after the present legislative program was completed, he would send a letter to Congress stating that it would be unnecessary to remain in session.

President Sees Smith

In order to aid the leaders in speeding adjournment, President Roosevelt conferred with Budget Director Harold D. Smith today on estimates for the deficiency appropriation bill, which is estimated to bring the total defense program voted at this session to more than $15,000,000,000.

House Republican Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, has demanded the Congress merely recess, in order that it may be quickly assembled in any emergency. Senate Minority Leader McNary of Oregon, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, has insisted that Congress remain in session.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Tex., however, is adamant on adjournment. He argued that if any emergency arises President Roosevelt can reassemble Congress in 24 hours.

The so-called "must" legislative program was boiled down by Democratic leaders to the following:

The conscription bill, on which conferees finally agreed yesterday.

The excess profits-Amortization tax bill, already approved by the House and reported for Senate action by its Finance Committee. Plans are for Senate approval before Saturday night, to be followed by a conference on Senate changes.

The $1,500,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan bill, providing $500,000,000 for use of the Export-Import Bank in handling surpluses of Latin-American countries as a part of the defense program. It is now in conference for composing of House-Senate differences.

The Sugar Production Control and Benefit Act, passed by the House and pending in the Senate, which the Administration wants extended for one year to meet demands of domestic sugar growers.

A bill to protect properties of men called to the colors under the conscription bill.

Senate Probing Ads Asking Funds for Willkie

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, announced yesterday that the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee had "invited" Oren Root, jr., and John O. Young, New York supporters of Wendell L. Willkie, to "explain a series of magazine advertisements asking funds" to help elect the Republican Presidential nominee.

GILLETTE

Gillette said the committee was investigating "to see if there is a violation of the spirit of the Hatch Act limiting these matters."

"I'm sure these men will come willingly," Gillette said. "If they don't we'll subpoena them."

The Senator said Root and Young in the advertisements had asserted that the solicited funds were independent from any State or national campaign fund.

Pointing to Hatch law limitations of national Presidential expenditures to $3,000,000 and individual contributions to $5,000, Gillette said that the Senate committee was eager to have Root and Young "explain just what their purpose is."

The Republican National Committee was $819,953 in the black on August 31, Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed reported to Congress yesterday.

Income amounted to $2,320,717 between January 1 and the last of August, with expenses of $1,392,833 and $107,931 in unpaid bills.

The report for the last three months also showed the G. O. P. had topped the Democratic National Committee's income for that period by $1,111,491. Republicans contributed $1,459,632 from June through August, while the Democrats got only $348,141 from donations and advertising, to wind up in the red.

New York, Sept. 12.—Ida M. Tarbell, noted author and authority on the life of Abraham Lincoln, who voted twice for Franklin D. Roosevelt, in a letter to the Republican National Committee, announced that she is in favor of Wendell L. Willkie's election in November.

The famous writer, now in her eighty-third year, wrote that "as I see it, we need a change in administering what is valuable in the New Deal. All that is good in Mr. Roosevelt's program stands a better chance of final realization through Mr. Willkie's handling than through Mr. Roosevelt's . . . I do not believe that Mr. Roosevelt is indispensable in a genuine democracy."

Wallace Airs Spending Views In Curb Talk

Minn. Sidewalk Crowd Hears Him Parry Questions

By the Associated Press

St. Peter, Minn., Sept. 12.—His views on spending, taxation and interest rates were given to a sidewalk gathering here today by Henry A. Wallace as he paused on his Vice Presidential campaign tour of Minnesota.

Answering questions from his listeners, he heard one man say:

"The trouble is there's no limit to this spending."

Wallace replied that when private capital does not flow Government funds must be expended until that time when labor is fully employed. If then spending continues he agreed there was a danger of inflation.

An elderly well-dressed man remarked that the Government "had pounded down interest rates" while taxes have constantly increased so that a person with property is left in a much worse condition than he used to be.

Wallace said he "granted that some had been hurt" but he contended that greater good had been accomplished through greater stability of banks and a concurrent reduction of losses.

At another point in criticizing the 74 per cent of Republicans in Congress who have voted against commodity loans, Wallace said he would make one exception—Senator McNary (Republican Vice Presidential nominee) for he has always been for the farmer."

Depression to Follow War

Redwood Falls, Minn., Sept. 12 (AP).—When peace comes to the world there will be need of large Federal expenditures by the United States Government, Henry A. Wallace declared today, to take up the slack that is bound to occur in employment as men and women are released from defense industries.

If Republicans are elected, he predicted, they would cut off Federal expenditures with such a jerk that the country would be plunged into a depression much worse than in 1932.

Earlier, at nearby Morgan, Wallace said Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, had come out in support of Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee for President, "because these rich men who must pay 80 per cent of their second million of income in Federal income taxes know the Republicans will stop this paying out of Federal funds for help for you farmers, and thereby make the burden of taxation less."

Not Cold, Normal, Says Weatherman Of Cool Spell

It wasn't too hot and it wasn't too wet or chilly in the first ten days of this month, even though many District residents may have thought it was. It was only Washington weather.

This was indicated by figures given yesterday by United States Weather Bureau Observer Milton A. Robinson, who said that the temperature was normal until yesterday morning when it dropped to 55, or 8 degrees below normal.

So far this month, Robinson said, there has been .41 of an inch of rain, which is .92 below normal. A low temperature of 48 was forecast for today which would be the lowest since May 12 when it was 43.

Highest temperature this month was on September 1, when it reached 84. Lowest was the 55 reached yesterday, which won't challenge the all-time record of 36 degrees for the month which fell on September 23, 1904.

Berlin Fights Fire British Bombs Set

English Destroyer, 6 Ships in Convoy Sunk, Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), Sept. 13.—German raiders returning late last night from England reported bombing west and central London, including the vicinity of Waterloo Bridge, and said they observed a chain of fires stretching from the southeast coast all the way to London.

The fires, they said, marked spots where the vanguards of the night raiders had dived on British objectives.

While Berliners slept without interruption by air-raid alarms, informed quarters said "retaliation" flights to England would continue without abatement; that, in fact, yesterday's British bombings of Hamburg and Bremen with 14 killed, called for more "retaliation."

Key Cities "Visited"

It was stated that besides the Thursday night raids on London, the Nazi planes also visited Liverpool, Birkenhead, Cardiff, Bristol and other places.

A spokesman said that although Berlin remained quiet, British planes had crossed into Germany during the night. He said they either were turned back or had objectives other than the capital.

(Last night, the German wireless broadcast reports that Nazi fliers returning from raids had seen new fires in southeast England—"a reddish haze spreading high over the countryside——;" burning sheds which apparently were airplane hangars, and a big fire in a British railroad yard.

(The destruction of six merchant vessels and a British destroyer in a convoy on the English east coast also was reported.)

3 Cities Bombed

Berlin, Bremen, Hamburg—all suffered in an early Thursday attack by the Royal Air Force which was acknowledged by the German high command to have brought "numerous fires and damages."

But this damage, it was declared, was confined to the residential quarters of these three major German cities. The dead were put at 14; the injured at 41.

For an hour and 32 minutes, the British bombers rode the sky over the center of Berlin.

British official announcements said the Anhalter railway station and the big Tempelhof airdrome in the city had been bombarded, but correspondents who visited these places failed to find any evidence of damage.

The Germans said there was no important military damage.

New Reprisal Blows

For their part—even as they made the announcement that "more planes have departed to strike retaliatory blows"—the Germans claimed a growing success for their campaign to break Britain and British resistance by ceaseless attack from the skies.

Pilots returning last night said they counted 33 fires in London and declared some dock and industrial districts had been bombed out of all recognition.

During Wednesday night and early Thursday they said, they turned heavy bomb fire on British dock and harbor facilities, utilities plants, airplane hangars, oil tanks—every sort of concentration vital to the British defense.

Among the targets heavily hit, it was declared, was Britain's Woolwich Arsenal, in the region of the lower Thames. Above that munitions center, the Germans said, fire leaped several hundred yards into the air.

the Royal Air Force's asserted and constant superiority in the air over British soil, the navy's almost untouched resources of men and guns, and on the nation's army.

"When the invasion comes some Germans will get through," one neutral declared. "Just as some bombers get through. The navy and R. A. F. never said they wouldn't. But there won't be many and I believe the army equal to the task of throwing them into the sea."

He said the British army would attack German landing forces while the navy and R. A. F., working in close coordination, would cut the forces off from communications with their continental bases.

Coasts Heavily Defended

The British army's defense against any invasion is based on two principles—primary attacks which seek to hold the invader on beaches or ports, and a secondary attack of greater strength delivered by armored contingents and columns of mobile infantry.

Coastal defenses include many grim appliances which have been constructed in great secrecy in the last three months. With these the army hopes to slow the German advance enough so that orders to "shoot them in their boats" can be carried out.

The most impressive single defense factor is the vast amount of fire power concentrated on every potential landing place.

Each day one or two beaches, especially on the west coast, become impossible to use for landing because of the increasing fury of Atlantic rollers smashing the banks.

Other beaches—where the tides described by informed naval circles as "good but not as good as a week ago for troop landings"—have been so obstructed and wired that it apparently would take at least a two-hour preliminary bombardment from the air or sea before troop-laden barges could approach them and British defense fire.

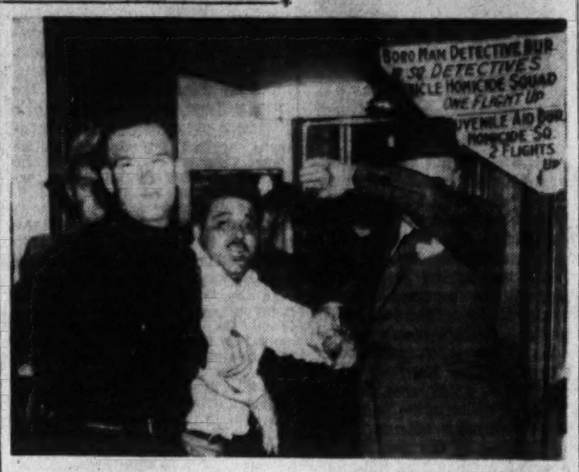
Suspect Struggles With Police



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"I'LL NEVER SQUEAL," cried Vito (Socks) Gurino (in shirtsleeves) and police and detectives hurried him off to New York District Attorney William O'Dwyer who accused Gurino of being a "key figure" in Murder, Inc. Knowing police were seeking him, Gurino sought refuge in a church and then grew hysterical when arrested for questioning. "I never was a rat," he said when the second wave approached they concentrated on other targets and dropped their bombs across the center of the docks and on a blazing warehouse.

'Bremen Is Afire—What a Fire!'

Vast clouds of smoke, lit by the infernal glare of raging fires beneath, billowed over the devastated area. Pilots who had seen the fire from as far away as Emden, said:

"All the buildings were outlined in flames. As we flew we could see roofs and walls crashing. We ran into two big fires and got direct hits on a large block of dock buildings."

Heavy damage was inflicted on the Anhalter station in the heart of Berlin and on the traffic lines running south from the Potsdam station, which had been raided the previous night.

Tempelhof Airdrome Hit

In a series of runs over the Anhalter station, the first raider bombed station buildings and tracks soon after midnight. Relays of raiders pressed home the attack. By the light of parachute flares, dropped high above the center of the city, the repeated salvos of bombs were seen to strike the freight yards of the two stations.

Other raiders turned their attention to antiaircraft batteries in the Tiergarten, while still others attacked the Tempelhof Airdrome, Berlin's main airport.

A shell fragment from the antiaircraft barrage pierced the engine cowling of one of the British machines. It narrowly missed the oil tank, but all the aircraft engaged in the attack on Berlin returned safely. From the widespread attacks along the hundreds of miles of front in the Reich and subject countries, only three British bombers failed to return.

An R. A. F. officer broadcast this evening how his machine bombed a large gas works in Berlin.

"Over the city the guns were letting off at us pretty heavily," he said, "but we were not hit. We found our targets without any difficulty. When the bombs burst there were four huge explosions across the works. I think that the first one must have hit a gasometer.

Flames Rise 1,500 Feet

"The first four large explosions were followed by a series of smaller explosions. Two huge fires started and great tongues of flame lept up. I estimated that they must have been rising to 1,500 feet. Then dense clouds of smoke began to pour out. It was the most terrific sight I have ever seen.

"Next I saw our incendiaries falling on the western edge of the plant. The rear gunner, I remember, shouted: 'Oh, boy. It's terrific.' The whole of Berlin must have seen the flames lighting up the sky. We could still see the reflection a quarter of an hour after we had left and about this time we made out another terrific explosion."

While the raid wracked population of London eats up accounts of the bombing of Berlin, it is clear both from the official communiques and talks with the R. A. F., that the raids over Berlin are as yet only flicks of the whip.

Battered London's public opinion demands reprisal raids. It longs to hear of smashed houses, hammered streets, toppling buildings and columns of smoke and flames surging into the sky.

Trouble Ahead for Berlin

The present raids are, as it were, a minimum of concession to public opinion. Military targets are chosen and a few bombers trundle over the capital of the Reich, but the Berliners have seen nothing yet. When the nights lengthen and it will be possible to spend six or seven hours over the German capital, then it will be worth while to detach massive forces to shatter and crash and blast Berliners until they cry for mercy. There is trouble ahead for them this winter.

But, for the time being, handier targets, such as Hamburg, Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, the oil plants at Monheim, an explosive factory at Frankfurt, freight yards at Hamm, Cologne, Coblentz, Mannheim, Erhang, a railroad junction at Namur, in Belgium, and airdromes in Germany and Holland, are more suitable subjects for attack. All these were bombed by the R. A. F. last night.

For nearly four hours relays of aircraft kept up an almost continuous assault on the harbor installation, shipbuilding yards and dock basins of Hamburg.

The first raiders arrived over their targets soon after 9 in the evening and started a fire which served as a marker for the following raiders. As the attack developed, great fires were started in a dock area to the west and northwest of the city. A series of direct hits were scored on jetties and docks to the east and west of the great Blohm and Voss Shipbuilding Yards.

At 1 o'clock this morning the crew of the last aircraft detailed for the attacks would see a huge fire blazing from a distance of 40 miles. They dropped a final stick of heavy bombs across the line of shipbuilding yards, but though the explosions could be seen, it was impossible to estimate the damage done because of the dazzling glow from the great fires raging beneath them.

Czechs Drink a Toast

The Czech squadron, which has been under intensive training in England for the last 43 days, made its first bombing flight as a unit last night when it swooped over the freight yards at Brussels in what was called a "very successful attack." Despite the heavy clouds, the fliers broke through the layers and bombed low, right onto the targets. On their return they drank a toast with their squadron leader to bigger and better raids.

Heavy attacks were also made during the night on key rail centers and freight yards in Germany, through which reinforcements of men and material are being sent to the German armies in the occupied territories of France, Belgium and Holland.

Bombs straddled the railway bridge across the Rhine at Cologne, burst on a railway line and started a number of fires and heavy explosions. Numerous fires and a series of short, sharp explosions, as if an ammunition train had been hit, blazed up at Coblenz, when bombs fell in the railway yard.

Two bombs burst within 30 feet of a very large supply ship at Bremerhaven. They were dropped from a plane which only a minute or so before had been hit by pompom fire which had ripped a great hole in its tailplane. Numerous hits were made within the dock area and among shipping lying in the harbor.

Other forces of heavy bombers raided the airdromes at Stade, Borkum, Norderay, Metalin and Husum.

For more than an hour large numbers of barges were heavily bombed at Flushing as medium bombers ferreted out the bases in which preparations for the invasion of England are believed to be going on. The docks, basins and barges moored in them were also heavily attacked in a four-hour raid on Ostend. Fires were raging in all parts of the harbor when the raid ended and two huge explosions flung up a column of black smoke 10,000 feet high.

All up and down the French Channel coast similar attacks were carried out. A violent explosion took place in the Carnot Basin at Calais, after fires started by British bombs had spread rapidly. A great number of bombs were seen to burst among barges in the crowded basin and docks.

Every pilot flying over these ports commented on the great number of barges and small ships which throng the basins and are moored to every available pier and jetty. Little doubt is felt here that concentrations of shipping such as have not been seen since Napoleon's time have been massed in these havens in preparation for the invasion of England.

London Archie Shifts Tactics, Cuts Bomb Toll

New Barrage System Hurls Up Continuous Screen of Shellfire

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 12.—"Archie"—that often misunderstood and criticized foe of raiding bombers—appeared today to be coming into his own.

A new tactic, by which "archie"—anti-aircraft guns—hurls up a continuous screen of shells around London, was credited with harassing German bombers to such an extent in today's nine-hour raid that only 20 bomb explosions were heard in the center of the city.

This was in contrast to hundreds upon hundreds of bomb blasts in the British capital in previous nights of raiding.

(At the same time a secret plane-detecting apparatus was being used to determine the height and course of Germanr aiders, the New York Times reported.)

No longer are the high-angle guns used exclusively to pick off individual ships high in the air. Instead of waiting for sweeping searchlights to spot single planes, scores of guns maintain a heavy screen on a designated target area where raiders are heard and seen with the limited help of the lights.

This method is similar to barrages of the World War which sought to shift with the plane, whereas fire at individual planes is similar to counter-battery fire.

The main objectives of anti-aircraft fire always have been to keep bombers high—so as to destroy their aim—and to break up their formations—so as to destroy unified effort.

In these, the new tactic seems to have been successful; today's British communique mentioned the anti-aircraft fire and its effectiveness in commendatory words and gave it credit for the reported lightness of the raid.

German sources also spoke of throwing up a similar tent of steel over Berlin and contended this prevented many English bombers from reaching the center of the city in today's 92-minute raid.

In London, the new antiaircraft technique had another effect. Dispatches from the English capital mentioned that Londoners waiting out the raid in shelters were heartened by the fact the din outside was caused for the most part by their own whanging guns, instead of by Nazi bombs.

Since one of the professed German reasons for the raids on London is to bring about a state of panic and disrupt the normal life of the city, such a heartening effect might be important.

Carol's Party Spends Night In Private Cars at Barcelona

By the Associated Press

Barcelona, Spain, Sept. 12.—Former King Carol, with Magda Lupescu and his retinue, spent tonight in special cars which were uncoupled from a train just as it was due to leave here.

It was understood the deposed King and his party would continue their journey tomorrow, probably to Portugal.

None of the party alighted from the three special cars, although a Barcelona hotel suite, the same used by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor after they left France last summer, had been reserved for Carol and his red-haired companion.

Glimpsed fleetingly through car windows, Carol appeared tired and worn.

The dethroned monarch's special train left the French-Spanish frontier this morning.

Magda Lupescu was traveling under the name of Helene Lourouz and had 15 or 20 dogs with her. Two cars attached to Carol's carriage were piled high with 5 tons of luggage, three automobiles and several wooden boxes for the dogs.

The couple probably will live either in Spain or Portugal. It was said in Lisbon today by Rumanian sources, however, that they might go to the United States.

Bucharest, Sept. 12 (AP).—Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's new military dictator, disclosed today that Magda Lupescue had tried to persuade Carol's son, Mihai, his successor, to go with them into exile, but that the 18-year-old had disregarded the advice.

Antonescu, in a personal account of Carol's abdication last Friday, described Mme. Lupescu's appeal to Mihai as "her last attempt to throw Rumania into chaos."

Meanwhile, formerly exiled Iron Guardists, fully trained in Nazi doctrine, were reported today to be en route to Bucharest from Germany.

Rumors spread that they would dispute the present leadership of the Fascist Iron Guard in an effort to weaken what opposition there is to Antonescu and to give him a tighter hold on the country.

Iron Guard Defies Ban on Uniforms

Budapest, Sept. 12 (INS).—Thousands of uniformed Iron Guards, in open defiance of a ban on uniforms ordered by Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumanian dictator, tonight thronged the streets of Bucharest singing seditious songs.

Reports reaching Budapest said the general feeling was that the Iron Guards, ruthless faction which has killed two premiers and twice tried to slay Carol when he was king, will attempt a coup d'etat soon.

District Officials Pass Registry Plan

Nineteen Boards To Be Formed In School Buildings

A selective service plan to register 95,000 men between the ages of 21 and 35 was approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

The city heads are now ready to invoke the plan as soon as registration day is proclaimed by the President. The program may be varied if the Burke-Wadsworth bill calls for new age limits.

The approved plan varies little from the first selective service plan submitted to the Commissioners by the three-man board which drew up the program. Under the earlier plans two schools for each of the 19 local board, or registration areas, were set up. One of the schools would have registered white registrants and the other colored registrants. The Commissioners dropped this plan in favor of registration at any school within the specified area for either white or colored.

The nineteen areas throughout the city are based on census tracts, so that about 35,000 inhabitants are included in any one area.

The plan calls for 19 local boards, one for each area, who will be selected from among prominent Washingtonians by the Commissioners and sent to the President for his appointment. A board of appeals, including one lawyer, who will be designated chairman, two physicians, two persons representing citizenry; one representing labor, and one for industry, will be selected by the commissioners and appointed by the President.

One Government appeal agent will be appointed for each local board. An advisory board will be appointed to aid the registrants and a medical advisory board to supervise the physical examination of all registrants will also be named.

Registration of all men will be handled by registrars appointed by the Superintendent of Schools. It is expected most of the registrants will be school teachers. Schools will close on Registration Day, and if this procedure requires two days the schools will be closed two days.

After the man has registered, the registration will be shuffled and then numbered in sequence. Questionaires designed to classify the registrants will be mailed to each man. The cards will then be classified in separate categories, to await the national lottery and the call of men for military training.

not be so limited, and that plants can be taken over if the President merely declares "the public necessity is immediate and the emergency in the public service is imperative."

Second Change

As explained by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, the former language was "too extreme and required too great a danger before the President could proceed. The new provisions are designed to meet present world conditions."

A second change made in the bill yesterday undertakes to make permanent the increase in Army pay from $21 to $30 a month for a private after four months' service, despite the fact that the draft bill itself expires five years hence.

House action on the conferees' report could be taken after the Senate acts today, but a vote tomorrow was considered more likely. Only one hour of debate is permitted in the House on conference reports.

Presidential signing of the bill is to be followed by a proclamation ordering the registration, probably about mid-October with the first 400,000 draftees being called out within a month later.

Neutrality Amendment Offered

In another defense-related action yesterday, Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, told the Senate that the acquisition of new air and naval bases from England in exchange for destroyers has necessitated an alteration in the neutrality law.

Introducing an amendment to remedy matters, Mead pointed out that munitions could not be brought to the bases in American merchant vessels as the law now stands.

The present neutrality act forbids any American merchant ships from touching at Newfoundland, a "combat area," and prohibits transportation of implements of war to the British islands in the Atlantic and Caribbean.

The proposed amendment would apply only to the naval bases, and would not affect application of the neutrality laws to the countries where the bases are to be located, the Senator said.

Costs Revised Upward

Copyright by New York Times

The Army has been forced to revise upwards by about 60 per cent its estimates of the costs of the first full year of military training under the selective service legislation.

This was revealed yesterday by a general staff official, who said that the action of Congress in raising base pay for all but rookies from $21 to 30 monthly and modifying the current rating system had played a large part in raising the initial year's cost from about $1,000,000,000 to $1,600,000,000.

The cost of leasing land, putting in water, sewerage and other services for cantonments also would be higher than estimated by Army experts when they testified before the Military Affairs Committees of the Senate and House, officials explained. The new estimates are based upon the induction and training of 800,000 men annually as originally planned, plus the construction of serviceable barracks for them, a nonrecurring item.

John B. Kelly Named to Make U. S. 'Tough'

President Picks Man From City of Brotherly Love for the Job

President Roosevelt yesterday picked on a man from the City of Brotherly Love to make his fellow Americans "tough."

KELLY

In his September 2 speech the President said world emergencies made it necessary for this country's people to "get tough."

Then John B. Kelly, city Democratic chairman of Philadelphia and a former Olympic sculling champion, sent Mr. Roosevelt a letter proposing a program for "physical preparedness" of the Nation.

He suggested a system of health organizations in all communities, walking clubs, mass calistehenics, and possible free clinics to advise people on health.

Mr. Roosevelt replied, telling Kelly in effect:

"You're it. Get busy."

Criticism of what were termed "brass hats" in the Army, Navy and the Treasury Procurement Division in the letting of defense contracts enlivened a meeting of Midwest Congressmen yesterday.

The nine-State group, organized to seek a larger share of defense orders, heard Representatives Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, and Cravens (Democrat), Arkansas, urge adoption of a "strong resolution" directed to department heads.

Cravens said the Army and Navy and Procurement Divisions resent the Defense Commission.

"We've got to bring pressure on the brass hats," he said.

Representatives Stefan (Republican), Nebraska, and Zimmerman (Democrat), Missouri, opposed adoption of any resolution which might have a "pork barrel scent."

Chairman Mundt (Republican), South Dakota, said he would call another meeting to consider an appropriate expression.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 12 (AP).—Training planes are being produced at the rate of one every three hours in the Boeing Airplane Co.'s Stearman Division Plant at Wichita, Kans., J. E. Schaefer, Boeing vice president and general manager of the Stearman division, said today.

The rate is expected to be stepped up within four months to a plane every 90 minutes, Schaefer said.

Pledge to Join Services Asked Of CAA Pilots

Future Candidates, If Qualified, Required To Make Promise

Future candidates for the Civil Aeronautics Administration's pilot training program must pledge themselves to enter the military air services of the United States, if qualified, Administrator Donald H. Connolly announced yesterday.

He stated that the pledge is not intended to set time or circumstance for entering military service, but provides a statement of intention to use the particular training in the national defense.

In preliminary courses getting under way this week-end in 500 colleges and universities, a total of 15,000 students will be enrolled, Col. Connolly said.

The minimum age for pilots has been raised from 18 to 19, to conform with Army and Navy standards, while the maximum age remains at 26, it was announced recently.

Male students who show marked ability in the preliminary course may be recommended for the secondary course, which would give a pilot a cumulative total of 200 ground school and 80 hours of flight work, it was stated. At the end of the period, pilots will be given consideration for further training. The preliminary course covers 72 hours of ground and a minimum of 35 hours of flight training.

Col. Connolly said that by June 30, 1941, the program expects to have turned out 9,000 pilots with at least 80 hours in the air.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee reported favorably yesterday two House bills framed to provide more officers needed for the expanding Navy.

One would permit appointment of graduates of Naval Reserve Training Corps units as commissioned officers in the line of the regular Navy.

The second would increase the maximum age for appointment of midshipmen to the Naval Academy from 20 to 21 years. This measure later was passed by the Senate and sent to the White House.

chance since Saturday to get editions out on time.

The sixth straight night attack began at 9:11 p. m., and the first wave of Nazi planes smashed at the city in an assault lasting an hour and 15 minutes before the sound of their motors died away as did the barrage. The alarm continued, however, through the night.

Streets Lit By Gunfire

For 15 minutes the city—lying under a sharp, squally early fall rain, was silent.

But then, the guns—which on Wednesday night had fired half a million rounds—thundered again, fighting a second wave. They, too, fled shortly.

There was another period of extraordinary quiet, but just before midnight two new Nazi squadrons sped in from different directions—south and east—and the anti-aircraft guns burst out anew.

The streets were alight with gunfire; at one time the explosions of falling bombs could barely be heard above the rolling boom of the anti-aircraft.

Daytime Almost Peaceful

The daylight hours had been almost peaceful here, in contrast to the long terror that had come from aloft in five preceding days of almost endless air attacks—attacks which through Wednesday were declared officially to have killed 1,175

Bombs were dropped during the day, however, on one town in the northeast and on several in southern England, destroying an undetermined number of homes and causing casualties.

Whatever the reason—whether it was the vastly broadened scope of British antiaircraft fire or simply that the Nazis were resting momentarily from the long strain of the assault—the city up to nightfall had but a single alarm.

That came at 4:39 p. m. and was over an hour and two minutes later—at 5:41.

Meanwhile, it was the offensive, and not the defensive, air arm of Britain that was most active yesterday.

R. A. F. Strikes Hard

The air ministry, cooperating with the silent and undiscussed operations of the fleet in the campaign to smash before it could be started any Nazi plan to try to cross the Channel with troops, announced that mighty new blows had been struck by the Royal Air Force.

Some of the results reported were: German convoy attacked in the Channel off Dunkerque, France; a German supply ship sunk; German convoy attacked off Cap Gris Nez; another German supply ship left burning; two Nazi E-boats (torpedo carriers) machine-gunned from low altitude; three German planes shot down in the struggle; barge concentrations, docks and shipping bombed at Ostend, Flushing, Calais and Boulogne.

It was disclosed yesterday that German raiders had wrought damage near the Bank of England, to the Church of St. John the Evangelist and in Regent street.

Among the objects hit Wednesday night was a 15,000-gallon water tank in the Fleet street publishing area; two hospitals, many houses and small factories.

announced this afternoon, and which was substantially confirmed here, will be Italy's primary contribution to the war and may well prove the opening move in the crucial attempt to destroy the British Empire.

Elementary strategy would seem to justify the belief that the attempted invasion of England will be timed to coincide with this shrewd blow at the most vital spot in England's African empire.

Italian official sources have as yet divulged nothing about this campaign. Today's war bulletin with its indication of the air activity all over the territory involved is a forerunner of big developments. However, until their confirmation comes one must entertain the possibility that this is a feint on a great scale to draw as much of Britain's forces as possible away from the isles, thus laying Britain open to the Nazi attack.

This, in fact, has partly taken place for Prime Minister Churchill and A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, have already admitted that British naval forces in the Mediterranean were doubled in the last few weeks and reinforcements of troops and material provided.

A puzzling statement Virginio Gayda makes in his editorial today in the Giornale d'Italia can now be clarified. He writes that "one can certainly calculate that more British units will soon arrive in the Mediterranean and above all the most modern and powerful destroyers which can be replaced by the fifty old units ceded by the United States." The reason Gayda could be so certain obviously is that he knew the Italians were on the move in Africa.

Mediterranean Fleet Grows

Gayda incidentally gives one detail about the British reinforcements. "At the end of August," he writes, "a British formation composed of a large battleship, two aircraft carriers, four light cruisers and numerous destroyers sailed from Gibraltar into the Mediterranean to join the naval forces already there."

The Rome radio hinted vaguely at the new developments this afternoon when it spoke of "an intensification of the warfare in Africa" and said that "Italy's armed forces will strike at the British, near-eastern divisions."

Guns Rumble on Border

Cairo, Sept. 12 (AP).—Artillery fire rumbled on the Egypt-Libya border tonight with increasing intensity after fresh Italian troops moved up near the border and the British got set for the long-awaited Fascist offensive into Egypt.

The firing between British and Italian advance units echoed after British fliers returned from reconnaissance flights to report the new movement of Fascist forces into Baria from the Libyan interior.

The Italians also were reported strengthening their lines on a triangular area between Azeiz, Bardia and Fort Capuzzo. The latter recently has been subjected to heavy shelling by British naval units operating off the coast.

Bolstering British units, Egyptian forces moved up near the Libyan border after having been withdrawn two months ago.

Spencer Tracy, 'A Regular Guy,' Visiting Few Days in Capital

Film Star Is Spending Part of Vacation Here; Friendly and Smiling, He's Just Like He Is in Movies; Autograph Fans Are Happy

Girls, his hair is gay—a little bit. But it's all right. In real life he's just like he is in the movies—strong, genial, with a ruddy complexion—steady blue eyes and a smile.

Yes, we mean Spencer Tracy. He's in town for part of his three-month vacation. It is his first visit to Washington since he played here 15 years ago at the Belasco Theater in "Royal Fandango," starring Ethel Barrymore.

"When are you leaving?" someone asked at his press conference yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel.

"Why does everybody try to get rid of me?" he said. "I'm not leaving. I intend to stay several days at least." And won't the autograph seekers be glad to know that!

Son Already 'Publisher'

He is here on his way to New York where his wife expects to meet him with their 16-year-old son, John, who will enter Wright Oral School this fall. John looks forward to a career as a newspaperman, not an actor, his father stated. He is already editor, publisher, printer and cartoonist of a paper of international circulation. It goes to about 150 persons in various parts of the world and contains news of the Tracy family.

"The cartoons are good too," his father declared with pride.

Tracy spent part of his vacation with Victor Fleming, director of "The Wizard of Oz," in British Columbia and was in California with his family for a month. He is now sight-seeing in Washington. He drove around yesterday, had lunch at the Washington Hotel with Sidney Franklin, who will direct one of his forthcoming films, "The Yearling," and Sidney, jr., also here from California "doing" the Capital. The F. B. I. is one of the places he will visit before he leaves, he says, which means the G-men will have the famous Tracy fingerprints as souvenirs.

Has Hearty Grip

His hands, by the way are short, broad and hard. When he shakes hands you feel the grip of the hero of "Captains Courageous." His feet are small—"the littlest I've ever seen on such a big man," said one of his feminine admirers.

Tracy enjoys riding, tennis and reading. He wakes up at 5 a. m., has his coffee and, if he is working, studies his script. Otherwise he reads. Joseph Conrad and Carl Sandburg are his favorite authors. At home, his coffee is made the night before and all he has to do is plug it in beside his bed.

His next picture probably will be "Tortilla Flats," he says, with "The Yearling" following.

said, or German and Italian troops might extend their occupation to the whole of France or a greater part of it.

In this connection, significance was seen here in an Italian press campaign against the Petain government which, the Popolo di Roma declared, lacked the ability to administer.

Hinting at the Italian anxiety over the situation in North Africa, the Rome paper asserted that this French colony was developing a scandalous atmosphere under the influx of what it called degenerate elements emigrating from Paris

Peril to Italian Tropos

Tunisia borders Italian Libya on the west. Egypt is on the east.

French troops in Tunisia, by breaking away from the Petain government and joining the De Gaulle forces allied with the British, might strike against Libya and menace Italian troops from the rear in event of a drive into Egypt, diplomatic observers pointed out.

After France's defeat, many French troops allied with British forces in Palestine and Syria were moved to North Africa. With revolting movements reported in various parts of French Africa, Italy was said to regard the French troops in North Africa as a serious menace to its whole military campaign in that area.

Famed London Church Periled By Time Bomb

'Suicide Squad' Piles Sandbags to Save St. Paul's Cathedral

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 12.—A "suicide squad" piled sandbags high tonight around a Nazi time bomb buried in the shadow of St. Paul's—England's greatest cathedral—while residents of the old "City of London," lying about the famous dome, waited nervously for it to explode.

While they waited, another time bomb, likewise prediscovered, exploded with a thunderous roar in another central London thoroughfare. Property on both sides of the street was damaged severely and the roadway choked with debris.

The sandbags were put in position to break the force of the blast, if and when it comes, and to protect the historic church, where Nelson, Wellington and others of England's heroes are entombed.

Traffic was stopped on streets that circle the cathedral and the area of greatest danger was roped off.

Even through today's air raid alarm the "suicide squad" worked. Police acknowledged cautiously that "some apprehension" was felt about what might happen to the great church. One bobby said he understood the buried missile was "a 500-pounder."

The dean left the cathedral and persons living nearby were warned to get out of their houses.

The delayed-action projectile is similar to the one which tore off a corner of Buckingham Palace Tuesday. Persons nearby heard the scream of the falling bomb last night, but no explosion followed.

The Buckingham Palace bomb took two days to explode.

There have been an umber of these "sleepers" in London, and there may be many more, buried in gardens and debris. Only yesterday, one of them killed five rescue workers near an East London school where hundreds were trapped by a direct hit.

Acid Times Bomb

When they are discovered, picked "suicide squads," usually made up of men from the Royal Engineers, try to smother them with sandbags and earth.

The bombs contain no clock; the timing apparatus consists of an oxydized plate on which acid begins to eat when the bomb is released from a plane.

Steel bands and concrete pillars placed in position in 1925 to enable the cathedral's dome to withstand the vibration of heavy street traffic may be of importance in saving the structure now.

The church is the seventeenth century masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, and is truly the National Cathedral of the kingdom. Begrimed with London's smoke, St. Paul's stands atop Ludgate Hill and its dome is visible from afar across the city's millions of chimney pots. It covers some 60,000 square feet in area.

Brother of Juliana's Husband Reported Arrested by Hitler

Prince Aschwin Also Ousted From Army For Refusal to Agree to Holland Invasion; Nazis Say British Drop Bugs on Potato Crops

By International News Service

London (Friday), Sept. 13.—The Daily Express reported today that Prince Aschwin zur Lippe-Biesterfeld, brother of Prince Bernard who is the husband of Holland's Crown Princess Juliana, has been expelled from the German army and placed under house arrest by order of Adolf Hitler.

This action, said the Express, was taken by the Fuehrer in retaliation for Prince Bernard's refusal to agree to the German invasion of The Netherlands. Bernard, Juliana and their two children fled to England along with Queen Wilhelmina just before German troops engulfed all of Holland.

Prince Aschwin, who had been an officer in the Reichswehr, was placed under guard in a castle near the Silesian town of Bomst, the Express said.

British Dropping Bugs In Nazi Potato Fields!

Berlin, Sept. 12 (AP).—Authorized German sources charged today that British airmen are throwing bags of "Colorado potao bugs" into potato fields in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium in an effort to lay waste the major food source of those countries.

These sources said the bugs multiply rapidly and are hard to control. They cited this alleged form of attack as another "example of British unfairness."

Horrors of War: The Servant Problem

Bomb fragments:

London, Sept. 12 (AP).—Heard in the Ritz bar:

"You know my dear, all this bombing is going to make it difficult to keep servants in town."

In an air raid shelter under one of London's biggest apartment houses about 3 a. m., were 42 persons sleeping on mattresses. Nearby "ack ack" batteries were making a terrific roar.

Faintly, a "sort of throttled buzz" came from one corner. Instead of a Dornier trying to get in, it was only an elderly gentleman snoring.

As the snores grew louder a woman sat up on her mattress, poked her sleeping husband and said:

"Harry, make him stop snoring, I can't get a wink of sleep."

It Would Have Been His Head in Germany

London, Sept. 12 (AP).—Alexander Inwood, 29, a laborer, pleaded guilty today to firing a strawstack during a raid when German aircraft were overhead, and thus proving a beacon. He was sentenced to three years imprisonment.

Justice Hallet said: "In Germany the penalty for such a crime would have been death."

'Hitler,' 'Duce' Damaged By German Bomb

London, Sept. 12 (AP).—In wax, "Hitler" and "Mussolini" narrowly escaped the blast of a bomb dropped by German raiders over London, it was disclosed today.

Models of the Berlin-Rome Axis leaders were among those on display at Madame Tussaud's waxworks, which was damaged by a bomb explosion.

Puerto Rico Theater To Get Raid Shelter

Copyright by New York Times

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 12.—The city government plans to build a new municipal theater with an air raid cellar able to accommodate from 3,000 to 4,000 people, it was announced today. Gov. William D. Leahy says he believes the prospect of San Juan being bombed is "very remote," but asserts that the cellar will have a peacetime use as badly needed parking space for cars.

Teamsters Dine American Plan On Capon, Terrapin

Teamsters at their convention banquet last night feasted on such dishes as diamond back terrapin soup with sherry, deviled imperial crab, breast of capon on Smithfield ham.

More than 2,000 guests, delegates to the convention of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America and their wives overflowed the Mayflower Hotel ballroom—with additional tables set up in adjoining rooms.

The banquet honored General President Daniel J. Tobin, who has had 33 years in that office, and General Secretary-Treasurer Thomas L. Hughes. An orchestra played popular tunes dating from 1906 to 1940, to commemorate the long service of these officers.

Board Weighs Its Efficiency In Crash Probe

McCarran Questions Officials on Guard For Plane's Parts

The Civil Aeronautics Board, at the behest of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday inquired into its own efficiency in investigating causes of the crash of a Pennsylvania-Central airliner near Lovettsville, Va., August 31.

McCarran's questions, which his secretary explained were "merely routine," were inspired by reading the record of the board's investigation, now in its second week. They went at length into whether parts of the engines and propellers taken from the plane by P.-C. A. officials were always guarded by CAB representatives.

Not Present "Several Times"

Luther Harris, maintenance vice president of the airline, under whose supervision the engines and propellers were removed from a muddy alfalfa field to P.-C. A. shops at Pittsburgh, said no CAB representative was present "several times" while the parts were being transported. One of these times, he said, was while they were being removed from Lovettsville to Pittsburgh in company trucks.

At Pittsburgh, Harris testified, the engines were disassembled and inspected under CAB supervision and certain parts, considered as bearing on the probable causes of the crash, were taken to Washington and turned over to the board's safety bureau. The propellers, he said, were sent to the Bureau of Standards.

A surprise witness, Robert Williams, who works as a cleaner for P.-C. A. at Washington Airport, stirred a brief sensation when he testified that a mystery passenger had boarded the big plane a few minutes before it took off on its fatal trip. This passenger, he said, was a man who entered the ship "two or three minutes" before any persons he knew to be passengers.

"Personally," said Williams under prodding by Board Member George Grant Mason, "I think he was a passenger."

Angle of Impact Estimated

A theory that the plane was in the last stage of recovery from a dive when it crashed, killing 25 persons, was advanced by Albert A. Vollmecke, aeronautical engineer in the office of the administrator of civil aeronautics. The distance, 1,800 feet in one instance, to which parts of the plane and bodies of the victims were catapulted, he said, indicated it had struck ground "at an angle that may have been less than 20 degrees."

Other experts had estimated the angle of impact at 30 to 40 degrees, and the speed at the moment of impact at better than 300 miles an hour, the latter estimate one with which Vollmecke agreed.

Vollmecke, as had all other expert witnesses who inspected the wreckage, declared there was no sign of lightning or of fire in the air and said there was no evidence of structural failure prior to the crash. His belief that there was no structural failure was concurred in by W. E. Koneczny, Safety Bureau structures expert, though Koneczny said the angle of impact must have been greater than 26 degrees, calculated on the height of corn standing directly behind the point of impact which was not disturbed.

Lightning Flash

Irvie W. Baker, member of the Loudoun County, Va., board of supervisors, who testified at a coroner's inquest at Leesburg Wednesday that the flash of lightning seen by all eyewitnesses shortly before the crash struck his barn, appeared and identified a rifle which he said was destroyed by the flash. It was leaning against the wall of a building, used as a slaughterhouse, which stands adjacent to his barn.

Baker said the time between the brilliant lightning flash and the howl of racing engines which immediately preceded the crash was minute and 20 seconds. This time, he said, was arrived at in experiments in which a CAB investigator timed his remembered movements during the thunderstorm in which the plane was wrecked.

French Taxed $8,000,000 A Day by Nazis

Price Set for Upkeep Of Reich Troops Occupying France

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 12.—The French public was informed officially today that the price they will pay for the German army of occupation of more than 2,000,000 men is 400,000,000 francs a day.

At the official franc exchange rate this is more than $8,000,000.

The expenses of the army of occupation had been fixed by the Germans at 20,000,000 reichsmarks daily. But since the Germans also have a fixed rate of exchange of 20 francs to one sppecial reichsmark, the bill thus mounted to 20 times 20,000,000 reichsmarks.

The big payment for the upkeep of France's conquerors is only part of the price France must pay for losing the war. Property destruction in the invaded regions has not been completed, but is estimated at many millions.

An estimated 100,000 men were killed. Pensions for their dependents will be required for many years.

An estimated 2,000,000 prisoners of war reduces the nation's man power, causing continuing manufacturing and agricultural losses.

The burden of upkeep of prisoners held in the occupied zones rests with the French people in cities and towns nearest the prison camps. They are expected to provide foodstuffs.

Germans in the occupied zone are spending their monthly wages liberally, buying many things they have not had in a long time. They are using the special marks which the French must accept at the rate of 20 francs for one mark. Storekeepers turn the marks in to the Bank of France, receiving francs in exchange, so individuals are not the losers.

The Bank of France has its vaults full of these special marks and no plan yet has been formulated whereby they can be liquidated.

Many think the Bank of France will be forced to "hold the sack," with the French people eventually paying.

Britain Held Seeking Deal With Soviet

Efforts to Soothe Baltic Seizure Friction Reported

By the United Press

London, Sept. 12.—Great Britain was reported reliably tonight to have proposed to Moscow a settlement of Anglo-Soviet differences arising from Russia's absorption of the Baltic states.

The British were said to have suggested:

1. Reciprocal cancellation of Moscow's claim to £4,000,000 sterling in Baltic banks and gold holdings in London and Britain's claim to £5,500,000 sterling investment in the Baltic states.
2. Alternatively both claims should be in abeyance until the end of the war.
3. That Britain is ready to charter from the Soviet government 30 or 40 Latvian and Estonian vessels in British ports.

It was believed Moscow would reject the offer on the grounds that the British claims are inflated and Baltic gold and ships which Moscow claims, would be left to the British.

Scene of Powder Plant Blasts

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Blasted to Blazes— Airview of the devastated area at the Hercules Powder plant laid waste by two terrific explosions yesterday. The plant is at Kenvil, N. J., only a short distance from Dover, and 30 miles northwest of the New York City metropolitan area. The blasts killed several, injured hundreds and was felt 125 miles away. Note how the debris is scattered, the trees shorn of leaves and the remaining buildings crushed. Smoke rolls up from a large blaze and several small fires

Socialist Calls Draft Threat To U. S. Liberty

Big Army Would Be 'Trend to Fascism,' Candidate Says Here

Maynard C. Krueger, Socialist Vice Presidential candidate, who will be outside the draft age (if enacted at 35) next January, said he will "resist" invasion if it comes, but opposes peacetime conscription in the belief that Hitler, with any combination, can't get through the United States Navy.

KRUEGER

In any event, were the Socialist Party currently in power it would maintain a strict hands-off policy toward Hitler, he asserted here yesterday. No expert, he said, ever has told Congress that this country could be invaded.

So he sees the creation of a large-scale army a threat because he does not believe it could be demobilized. Economic conditions would forbid it and the army would remain, a trend toward fascism, he said.

With all this, however, he emphasized that his party is not pacifist. It delegates the peacetime conscription issue to the individual conscience, but at the same time "the full facilities of the organization" will be made available to members either responding to the draft or resisting it.

Deplores "Hysteria"

Prof. Krueger views recent United States action in Mexico as indicative of some possible difficulties.

Tradition, he said, always has been to "straighten Mexico out" before some stronger foreign policy got under way.

He did not blame the President specifically, but said he believed there was more hysteria in the White House than in Congress and more hysteria in Congress than in the electorate. He would not predict that his party would win, "but we will elect as many presidents and vice presidents as the Republicans do."

His party, he did predict, will do better than in 1936. He promised a surprise, should the party make the ticket in California, where, he said, many are tiring of Dr. Townsend and "ham and eggs."

Peril to Labor

Prof. Krueger addressed a Socialist meeting last night at the Hamilton Hotel, following a press interview.

"If the military program keeps on expanding, nothing in the world can prevent the substantial wrecking of the labor movement on the military rocks. And if the labor movement is wrecked we shall have fascism in this country without waiting for Hitler to send it over. It will be a 100 per cent homegrown domestic American brand of fascism and it will wave a flag in one hand and swing a bludgeon in the other. You cannot stand at a crossroads, one toward socialism and the other toward militarization and take the military road without moving in the direction of fascism of which the regimentation of labor is only one early phase," he said.

Congressional Edict Keeps D. C. Testing Lab Closed

of the opinion the work could be done just as efficiently at the laboratory already built and paid for by the District."

The original rider was inserted in the bill by former Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas.

According to Representative Stefan (Republican) of Nebraska, member of the House appropriations subcommittee for the District, there also was some hint among members that there would be less likelihood of political influence being brought to bear by contractors if all local testing of construction materials was conducted by an agency of the Government.

"Congress felt," he said, "that the work not only could be done more efficiently at the bureau but at less expense to the District—that more uniform tests could be made and city would get better breaks."

All samples of construction materials have been sent—at District expense—to the bureau for testing. From 1933 to the end of 1939, the city paid the bureau $183,330.06—an average of $28,000 a year.

The same work could have been done at the closed District testing laboratory for approximately $13,000 a year, according to testimony offered by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, during recent Senate hearings.

Because of increased construction activities the first six months of this year, the Bureau of Standards tests have already cost the city $26,213.01 in 1940, the records show.

"It is an absurd situation," said a high ranking city official yesterday, "but our hands are tied. We frankly don't know why we are not permitted to use our own testing facilities."

And for the increased costs, the District is receiving 35 per cent fewer tests than it conducted the final year its own laboratory was in operation. It was explained by authorities yesterday that the city can't afford to send the bureau such a variety of tests as could be carried on in its own laboratory.

"If we could only reopen our own testing station," said one official, "the money saved could well go to the Traffic Department's life saving program or even to augment the Police Department's personnel—two crying needs."

It also was pointed out that tests at the Bureau of Standards take far more time than under the other system. An examination which would normally take about an hour in the local laboratory, takes a minimum of 24 hours at the bureau, said the city spokesman.

Because authorities have been hopeful each year that the Congressional proviso would be eliminated, the laboratory equipment has been kept in such condition that operations could be resumed on 24-hour notice.

Renewed efforts to reopen the station and release funds for other necessary purposes, it is uderstood, will soon be made by interested members of the Board of Trade, headed by P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the traffic committee. Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, now has the problem before him for study.

Standards Unit Gains Stature With Bombings in Europe

With every bomb that rained down upon London and Berlin yesterday, the National Bureau of Standards here in Washington took on new importance.

As the ferocity of the war increases, so do the chances increase that Great Britain's famous N. P. L. (National Physical Laboratory) and Germany's equally noted P. T. R. (Physikalich - Technische Reichsanstalt) will be wiped out, leaving the United States Bureau of Standards virtually the sole surviving institution of its kind.

"I fear that the N. P. L. already may have been bombed," Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, bureau director, said yesterday. He pointed out that the British research and testing unit, located on London's southwest outskirts, is intensively engaged in aeronautics work and undoubtedly would be classed as a military objective.

The European war has placed an added burden on the Washington bureau, not only by giving it multifarious duties of a national defense nature, but by making its facilities more eagerly sought than ever before by other governments.

For example, Argentina is now setting up its own standards bureau and is calling upon the United States citadel of science for aid and advice. Brazil, Chile and Bolivia, among other Latin-American countries, are thinking of doing the same thing and have sent representatives here for information.

Dr. Briggs disclosed that the bureau recently tested a quantity of radium for Argentina and has performed similar jobs for Mexico and Cuba.

Until this summer a popular sightseeing spot, with tours through the numerous research and testing buildings conducted daily, the National Bureau of Standards is today a formidable, uninviting spot where visitors are not welcome, due to the fact that it is heavily engaged in defense activities.

Here lenses are being ground for submarine periscopes and any number of other preparedness jobs being pushed.

Outsiders may enter the reservation only upon official business and then they must identify themselves at the gate both going and coming. Approximately 850 persons are now employed at the bureau, with another 100 in the field.

Georgia Returns Eugene Talmadge To Governorship

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Georgia Democrats have returned Eugene Talmadge, one of the most vociferous anti-New Dealers in the South until a few months ago, to the Governor's chair for a third term, returns from yesterday's primary showed tonight.

Talmadge, who silenced his criticisms of President Roosevelt during this summer's campaign, rolled up a county unit total of 328, of 122 more than the majority necessary for nomination.

The popular vote:

Talmadge, 176,306; Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts, 121,438; Abit Nix, Athens attorney, 42,181.

For three contested seats in the House of Representatives winners were:

First District—Incumbent, Hugh Peterson.

Eighth—John S. Gibson, Douglas.

Ninth—Incumbent, B. Frank Whelchel.

Greenbelt to War Against 'Cowboy' Bicycle Riders

Aroused by the "indiscriminate" bicycling practices of the community's younger residents, Greenbelt officials are considering legal steps to control the cyclists.

Wallace F. Mabee, director of public safety, said an ordinance barring sidewalk cycling could easily be enacted, but admitted himself puzzled as to means of enforcement. The impounding of the cycles of offenders, for varying periods, is one suggested method, he said.

Gen. Camacho Ruled Winner In Mexico Vote

Deputies Proclaim Cardenas Candidate As President-Elect

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Sept. 12.—Polo-playing Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho was proclaimed President-elect of Mexico today by the Chamber of Deputies on the basis of an electoral commission report that he beat Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan by 2,476,641 to 151,101 votes in the disputed July 7 election.

Mexico now has two Presidents-elect, each backed by his own Congress, and in this impasse, lie the seeds of civil conflict.

The quarrel between the two generals over who is to succeed Lazaro Cardenas for the six-year term starting December 1 moved a step closer to a showdown to the uproarious applause of deputies and the gallery for Avila Camacho and catcalls for three Almazanista deputies who voted to reject the electoral commission's report.

"Throw them out!" the gallery shouted.

Military Declared Loyal

Deputy Alejandro Carrillo, editor of the labor newspaper El Popular, apparently referring to the talk of revolution implicit in the dispute, emphasized in an oration that "the army and all other sectors are loyal and solidly behind Camacho.

Deputy Carlos Orlaineta, of the Federal District (Mexico City), was hooted and hissed when he declared, "on behalf of the Almazanistas in the Chambers I must oppose the commission's report because I think the winner was Gen. Juan Andreau Almazan."

Almazan, who left the country after the riotous July elections, is now visiting in Baltimore, Md. A congress of his own followers, who insist they are Mexico's legally elected legislators, has proclaimed him President-elect.

Rumors of Revolt

Almazan's departure from Mexico was followed by widespread precautions and rumors of an impending revolt to throw Cardenas out of office and seat Almazan even before the December inaugural.

(Foreign interests in Mexico which have undergone widespread expropriation under Cardenas are said by Camacho's backers to have supported the Almazan candidacy. Almazan is a rightist, opposed to much of the socialistic reform under Cardenas.)

The vote of a third candidate, Sanchez Tapia, former minister of national economy under Cardenas, was given as 9,840.

Thus little more than 2,500,000 of Mexico's 16,500,000 population voted in the presidential election, according to official figures.

Lost Chivalry

Associated Press cables yesterday carried the report that Stefan Starzynski was executed, September 1, in the notorious prison camp at Dachau. Though this report comes via London there is no reason to doubt it. It is quite of a piece with everything that is known of the Gestapo's method of dealing with enemies who fall into its hands after having comspicuously displayed those qualities which the Nazis so much admire —that is to say, bravery and patriotism.

So cataclysmic have been the events of the past few months that the name of Starzynski may already have been forgotten. Yet only a year ago it commanded the admiration of the world. Starzynski was the mayor who, after the Polish armies had been destroyed and the land laid waste, inspired the defenders of Warsaw to continue resistance. To repeated German demands that the city surrender, Starzynski answered: "Resist to the last gun, to the last man."

Whether Starzynski really believed that French and English aid would ever come to his beleaguered and half-demolished capital, already filled with tens of thousands of corpses, there is no way of knowing. Yet the sequel suggests that the resistance of the city was something more than the reckless heroism so long associated with the Polish spirit. Many soldiers and inhabitants of Warsaw doubtless preferred death in battle to the fate in store for them at the hands of their conquerors.

Early this year it was reported that in an effort to degrade him in the eyes of the world the Germans meant to try Starzynski on a charge of misappropriating municipal funds. No more was heard about this trial, but the very word "Dachau" is enough to suggest the nature of his imprisonment and death.

There seems a profound psychological weakness in the policy of a ruler who can shower honors and advancement on the Austrian traitor, Seyss-Inquart, and wreak such sordid and unsoldierly vengeance upon the heroic Pole, Starzynski. Even Jenghiz Khan was wiser than that.

God And Democracy

It is related that the Emperor Napoleon asked the Marquis de la Place why there was no mention of God in the exposition of his theory of celestial mechanics. "Sire," answered the great astronomer, "I had no need of that hypothesis."

Another famous mathematician, Dr. Albert Einstein, has expressed his conviction that democratic society has no need of God in the sense of "a Divine Will existing as an independent cause of natural events." Indeed, said Dr. Einstein, the concept of a personal God is the main source of present-day conflicts between religion and science. He went on to say that, although science is yet unable to disprove categorically the existence of a personal God, it would be "not only unworthy but fatal" for theologians to take advantage of that fact.

Dr. Einstein's emphasis upon "striving after rational knowledge" as opposed to "the fear of life and the fear of death and blind faith" will appeal to many who are not inclined to follow him in ruling God out of the universe. His message would doubtless have been more effective if he had not assumed that the pursuit of truth wherever it may be found is incompatible with belief in a personal God.

Dr. Einstein spoke in New York before the group of scientists, philosophers and theologians who have undertaken the rather formidable task of organizing and integrating "the thought of democracy." The participants had been drawn together by their common opposition to the totalitarian system of ideas, but it was soon evident that they were seriously divided among themselves on the most fundamental points.

Dr. Mortimer Adler, for example, told the gathering that democracy needs to be saved "not from Hitler but from the professors." He declared that the disorder in modern culture results from disorder in the minds of its "teachers and savants." Through their teaching the disorder "spreads out in ever-widening circles from generation to generation." Prof. Sidney Hook denounced Dr. Adler as presumptuous and his statements as "categorically false."

M. Jacques Maritain said that any education which subordinates philosophy and theology to science is "potentially Fascist." But Prof. Douglas Macintosh insisted that theological teaching must contain "a nucleus of verified empirical knowledge."

Very little unification of democratic thought seems to have emerged from this gathering. And if progress is to be made toward that objective, it will probably have to come through harmonizing the concepts of religion, science and philosophy instead of breaking down the basis on which any one of them rests.

Congress has taken a long time to whip the conscription bill into acceptable form. As the measure now stands, however, it represents a triumph for cool thinking and sound judgment. In the end the democratic process of debate and compromise has brought forth a measure with which the country should be well pleased.

The foremost achievement of the conference committee was elimination of the Fish amendment. That proposal, calling for a 60-day drive to secure voluntary enlistments before men could be drafted for training, would only have thrown a monkey wrench into the machinery of selective service.

After some Congressmen had extracted from this proposal all its imaginary political advantages it lost favor rapidly. The Administration opposed it. It met sharp criticism from Wendell Willkie, Presidential candidate of the Republican Party. Even the Senate, which had previously rejected this amendment by only one vote, sharply stiffened its opposition and this cleared the way for the action which the conference committee has taken.

The Senate conferees also showed good judgment, not only in accepting the House provision for commandeering factories for defense purposes, but also in improving that amendment. Senator Russell's proposal that the Government take permanent possession of plants failing to agree on terms with the Army and Navy has been completely discarded.

As the bill stands it would permit the Government to commandeer the products of any recalcitrant company or to take over its plants on a rental basis. Disagreements over the rate of compensation could be carried to the courts. And these drastic powers could be exercised only after a declaration by the President showing urgent public necessity for such action.

There is doubtless some disappointment that the age limits for trainees have been narrowed to 21-35. The original House bill would have permitted a wider margin of choice. But the group from age 21 to 35 includes many times the number of men needed for training. It does not appear that the selective system will be handicapped in any material respect by this compromise.

Discriminating judgment was also shown in providing for local draft boards; in assigning to civil courts the trial of "draft dodgers" not inducted into the service; in aiding conscripted men to vote; and in permitting students enrolled in colleges to postpone their service until next June.

The conference committee has gone so far in eliminating objections to the bill that it should meet with no further opposition. As it goes back to the Senate and House for final action, the issue will be whether or not the United States should be adequately defended against what President Roosevelt calls "the raging forces loose in the world." Answers to that question in the past always have been, and probably always will be, in the affirmative.

Economic Defense

By a vote of 43 to 27 the Senate gave its approval to the bill authorizing a $500,000,000 increase in the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank. Since the measure has already passed the House, though in slightly different form, its final enactment should not long be delayed.

The United States will thus soon be in a position to aid Latin American countries in resisting any attack upon their economic systems by the totalitarian powers. Inter-American cooperation of this sort is no less vital because it is economic rather than military and strategic in its nature.

The bill will permit the Export-Import Bank to "assist in the development of the resources, the stabilization of the economics and the orderly marketing of products of the countries of the Western Hemishere." Without such aid some Latin American nations, sorely pressed as they have been by the dislocating effects of the war, would find it extremely difficult to resist Nazi economic pressure and penetration in the event of a German victory.

In the debate preceding the Senate vote on the measure, critics of the bill expressed the fear that the proposed loans would never be repaid. That debate is a justified warning against reckless use of the broad discretion which Congress has given the Administration through this bill. The President acquires a heavy responsibility to see to it that the enlarged resources of the Export-Import Bank are wisely employed.

It would be foolish, however, to regard the contemplated transactions as wholly commercial in their nature and, therefore, to be judged purely by commercial standards. The bill is primarily and basically a measure of defense complementary to our military and naval rearmament programs.

Shooting The Works?

The titanic struggle overseas has now reached a phase of frightfulness scarce paralleled in Europe since the wars of religion, or perhaps since the Mongol invasions. Two great capitals are being subjected nightly to wholesale bombardments. Millions of noncombatants, men, women and children alike, are in growing danger of extermination.

Famine and plague are already foreshadowed. Yet neither side has unleashed anything like the full apparatus of destruction at its command.

A great deal of apprehensive attention is being given to the mounting crescendo of atrocity accusations in the Nazi press and to the threats of reprisal with "surprise weapons." Hitler, to be sure, has boasted of his "mystery weapons" before, but has not yet produced any that was unfamiliar to his enemy. Some fear, therefore, that by this latest "surprise" he means nothing more nor less than the long dreaded and long delayed introduction of poison-gas warfare.

Of course, both Germany and Britain are signatories to the protocol of 1925 whereby poison gas was outlawed as an instrument of war. But conscientious regard for this treaty has probably been less of a factor than the certainty of reprisals in thus far preventing aerial gas attacks in the present war.

Large-scale use of poison gas against London or other English cities at this time would suggest one of two strategic circumstances: Either Hitler is now ready to shoot the works—i. e., to stake everything, even the lives of millions, on one final effort to annihilate his last remaining enemy in arms; or he believes the Royal Air Force to have been so weakened that it can no longer retaliate in kind.

However, the tactical value of gas attacks, as demonstrated against the Canadian and British infantry at Ypres, must depend mainly on the element of surprise. After the rapid development of the gas mask it ceased to be a weapon of much importance. But whether gas defense can be as effectively organized among civilians in crowded cities as among soldiers in the field remains a matter of doubt.

Far more terrible than lethal gas, in the opinion of most experts, is thermite. This is the compound of iron oxide and powdered aluminum employed in a welding process well known to industry. Military men know it as one of the most potent of incendiary agents, capable, it is said, of melting even steel girders. The destructive potentialities of thermite were well demonstrated in Spain and in the Red bombardments of Helsinki.

Probably thermite was in the "superbombs" used by the Nazis to destroy the Thames-side warehouses and docks and in the bombs the R. A. F. has been dropping on the Channel ports and the Hamburg and Bremen waterfronts. All these, however, can be considered as homeopathic doses. There are many who insist that if both sides were to employ thermite on a grand scale both London and Berlin would soon be no more than two vast and smoldering ash heaps.

It seems odd that our forbears should have made so much fuss over Greek fire and dum-dum bullets instead of thanking heaven that they would not live to see the age of science in its fullest flower.

Another Link

A new and significant link between the nations of the Western Hemisphere has been forged at Philadelphia where the American Bar Association is meeting this week. The A. B. A. ratified the constitution of the Inter-American Bar Association and accepted membership in that organization.

The Inter-American Bar Association came into being last May during the sessions of the American Scientific Congress in Washington. Its purpose is to bring the lawyers of the United States and Latin-American countries into closer association and to aid in the solution of legal problems arising between the various countries of the New World.

Sharp differences in the laws governing trade and commerce in these countries are sufficient justification for this new agency. Beyond the technical service it may render, however, is the broader necessity of cultivating mutual understanding among the peoples of the American republics. If the Bar Association devotes itself intelligently and assiduously to this task, it can render a service of inestimable value.

The man in a Western State seen kicking himself all over a vacant lot had reason for doing so. He insured himself against his wife having twins and she had triplets.

It's a toss-up as to which is the more crooked of two of our national sports: wrestling or politics.

The voter is receiving a lot of attention now and having a perfectly wonderful time. After November he will have to slip quietly back into oblivion for three long years.

If you can't think of anything else just now for which to be thankful you might spend a moment being thankful that mosquitoes aren't as large as bombers.

Einstein And Religion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this morning's Post we noticed that "Einstein urges abandonment of personal God doctrine."

Yet Prof. Albert Einstein states that "science without religion is lame" and "religion without science is blind."

Now let us see what is meant by "religion." It cannot be an abstraction. It must be something definite; because it is an attitude toward God which must be applied in life. Also it is not a human philosophy; because it is definitely a divine precept.

History shows that God in His infinite essence never has been known to man. For God is infinite, and man is finite. But God's purpose and attributes were manifested to man through intermediaries who were men. These stood between God and humanity, and mirrored forth His divine qualities and attributes, thus stimulating and educating man's higher nature.

The essence of the phenomenal sun being unknown to man, what we call "the sun" in the phenomenal world is only what we can know of it. This is its emanation: namely, its qualities and attributes—its light, heat, creative power, etc., manifested in their effects.

Abraham, Moses, Zoroaster, Buddha, Christ, Mohammed were all persons. They brought the knowledge of the inner, subjective mystery—the mystery of God—to man; just as the scientists have brought to man the knowledge of the objective, phenomenal mysteries which are on the surface of creation.

What we need today is to cleanse ourselves from man-made, abstract speculations and religious prejudices, and to investigate the teachings of all the religions.

By "religion," however, I do not mean theological creeds or rituals. I mean the fundamental oneness of their teachings as they were revealed in their purity by these intermediaries between God and man. Then we will have an intelligent understanding that every human feeling and thought can be controlled for constructive good through these manifestations of God by His omnipotent power.

Asks American He'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The spirited talks over the air by well-known American commentators have been followed here in England with the keenest appreciation, and people here now realize how true a reflection they are of American sympathy for the cause of democracy for which England is fighting.

As one who has visited your country and traveled extensively in the United States, I can understand the real purport of American feeling for Great Britain. What I should like to emphasize here is the best method to translate this sympathy into concrete help.

There is no doubt that this war has so far demonstrated the vital necessity of air power, and it is impossible for us to be too strong in the air. What a fine opportunity for the American individual to show practical appreciation by contributing to a local fund, with the object of purchasing American planes for Great Britain!

And apart from the financial help, it has been a great stimulus to read in the newspapers of American pilots volunteering their services in order to fight by the side of their British cousins.

Referring to the trade of American destroyers for the right to build naval bases in Western Hemisphere possessions of Great Britain, this will be a great help to us. Since the capitulation of France, Britain alone has to patrol a tremendous length of coast line occupied by the Germans. These old vessels of America will release the more powerful units of the British fleet for offensive action.

On the economic side again, the American public could help tremendously by purchasing as many British goods as possible, not to the detriment of American industry, but in place of supplies formerly imported from the continent of Europe.

The attitude of the British public is one of quiet, calm and grim determination to see this ordeal through, and everyone can be of help, whether near the "front" or from afar. WALTER BUCHLER.

Fleet And Election

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One aspect of the destroyer-naval base deal seems to have escaped general comment; namely, that it has probably decided the outcome of the election.

If, on November 5, Mr. Roosevelt can claim to have saved the British fleet, he will be almost unquestionably reelected. He will have achieved, or will get credit for having achieved, a triumph of the utmost importance which cannot fail profoundly to influence the vote

Preservation of the British fleet from destruction or capture has been this summer the primary objective of Anglo-American statesmanship. If our indirect naval aid, and still more the joint American-British naval command implied in Mr. Churchill's pledge not to scuttle or surrender the fleet, attains that objective, the Administration will appear as the savior of American security.

Contrariwise, any Administration in which so great an American tragedy as the loss of the British fleet should occur, would be irretrievably discredited and inevitably repudiated. Mr. Roosevelt's personal political future, as well as the future of the country, has been at stake. If he succeed in the preservation of Anglo-Saxon naval supremacy while obtaining a string of sea bases long recognized as vital to this country's security, he will be invulnerable to any charges of laxity in defense preparations.

Business—relieved of the specter of a possible German victory this fall—will go into a boom under stimulus of the arms program and renewed general confidence. That will clinch the political outcome.

Looking back, one might be excused for wondering a little whether the danger to Great Britain and the fleet was so urgent or so imminent as official or semi-official spokesmen have intimated—whether the military view of the situation emanating from some "inside" sources may have been colored with propaganda. If so, it was successful and—in the present mood of the public—if ever suspected, will be forgiven in advance. L. M. GRAVES.

British Fleet

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it wise for us to rely on the British fleet being saved if England herself goes under? France promised, as Great Britain now has, not to surrender her fleet to Germany. We know what happened when she found herself in the German maw.

Report has it that Leopold surrendered the Belgian army because the Germans threatened, otherwise, to destroy every city in Belgium.

When completely at the mercy of a lawless and conscienceless foe, what can a government do but surrender unconditionally?

Foot-Washing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post Impressionist column in The Post of August 28 told a story of an Ozark foot-washing. I have no objection to that article, for, although I never saw a foot-washing ceremony characterized by unrestrained emotionalism, nevertheless, the story reads like an unprejudiced objective account of an actual occurrence.

What I am writing to emphasize is that foot-washing ceremonies are not confined to backwoods communities and uncultured people. Neither are they usually accompanied by disorderly conduct. As a matter of fact, there are a number of religious groups in America which practice foot washing. Congregations of these groups in America are scattered in practically every large city in the United States, and there, from time to time, one may find, among others, college professors and business men participating in the religious ceremony of foot washing.

This practice is based on the thirteenth chapter of John, where Christ is said to have washed His disciples' feet and commanded them to do likewise. There is exactly the same reason for following this literally that there is for taking the Lord's Supper literally, and such was the belief and practice of the universal church for ages. St. Augustine described the way in which this custom was observed by the Catholic church in his time in the early part of the fourth century.

The widespread and long continuance of this custom is testified by the action of the Synod of Toledo which in 694 went so far as to exclude from the communion table those who refused to have their feet washed on Maunday Thursday. It was practiced by the Anabaptists during the sixteenth century and was even practiced in the early days of the Church of England.

As I have said, this custom is still kept up by a number of religious groups tracing their origin back to the Anabaptists of the sixteenth century. Michael Faraday, who has the right, by seniority at least, to be called the greatest scientist of all time, was a member of one of these foot-washing groups in the London of his day.

The Peace Demonstration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your account of the peace prayer meeting at the Capitol, as reported in the September 6 issue of The Post, might have been interpreted charitably but unflatteringly as an indication that the meeting was covered by reporters who saw far less than the casual observer and also "saw" nonexistent things. But your editorial of September 7 issue makes such a charitable interpretation untenable.

Far from showing intelligent handling of the situation and "much restraint and self-control," the police did everything to turn a peaceable and rather ineffectual demonstration into a bitter controversy. They vacillated from unnecessary brutality to poor attempts at kidding. It is pertinent to ask by what authority the marines who "happened" to be in the crowd assisted the police in pushing the crowd around, dragging elderly women from their knees while praying, and tumbling one over the stone coping.

We have much to learn from the English who knew what they were about when they established the institution of Hyde Park.

The Post Impressionist

The Artist

H. L. MENCKEN complains in the fourth edition of The American Language that Americans are a bunch of sissy-pants when it comes to swearing, that our efforts at profanity lack force and punch, and that we are without anything approaching a "vocabulary of indecency."

Mr. Mencken should know, and I'd be the last person on earth to question his authority in such matters, but if what he says is true then I think it's high time someone sent a flock of missionaries up to Staunton, where I did my growing, for I went to school with boys who could, and frequently did, curl your hair with a few hastily but smoothly put-together cuss words. As a matter of fact, I regarded myself as not deficient in the art of swearing, but that was before I met Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith and I were never formally introduced. He was the second mate aboard an oil tanker on which I once dispensed hash, and hardly had I set foot on the ship before a fellow messboy cautioned me to look out for Mr. Smith. He gave me to understand that the second mate could stunt a man's growth just by swearing at him.

I was unimpressed and continued unimpressed when, not more than ten minutes later, this very same Mr. Smith gave me a verbal going-over for walking up on deck with a lighted cigarette. His choice of expletives was excellent, but he didn't have his heart in the job.

The next time I saw Mr. Smith in action was down in Tampico where we were getting ready to sail one bright dawn when it developed that Johnny, one of the messboys, was missing. The steward and I found him just about embalmed in tequila.

We managed, through eloquent persuasion accented by blows on the head, to get Johnny back to the ship where, just as he was about to go aboard, he managed to get his foot securely wedged between the dock and the gangplank.

He wrestled mightily in an effort to free his foot but to no avail and suddenly, looking up, I saw Mr. Smith come charging down the gangplank. I thought surely I was going to hear something eloquent in the line of profanity this time but it was no go. Mr. Smith was too mad for speech. He just stood over Johnny, trembling, and then without warning of any kind whacked him over the head with, of all things, a very dead fish.

But luck was with me, and later I was privileged to sit in on what a qualified observer of long experience told me was Mr. Smith's greatest triumph.

The next time we went to Bayonne, orders came through for us to go to Carapito, Venezuela, and Mr. Smith took a new lease on life. Carapito is reached from the coast via a river so shallow that only half-loaded tankers can traverse it. After taking on a half cargo at Carapito, ships must go back down the river and out to a spot off the coast where an anchored tanker supplies the balance of the load.

This thing of jockeying a ship up to, and tying her up with, another vessel in open water is a tedious process. The very prospect warmed the cockles of Mr. Smith's heart. On the afternoon we left Carapito, the second mate put on formal attire: freshly polished white sneakers, khaki trousers, a silk undershirt and a handsome straw hat with red band. He went up on the boat deck, from where he would direct the seamen handling the ropes as well as Cowboy, the kid at the steam winch, and started pacing back and forth.

Dusk faded into night and at about 10 o'clock the bridge picked up the anchored ship and we eased toward her, slower and slower.

Meantime, Mr. Smith went into action. He jumped back seven generations and canvassed Cowboy's ancestry so thoroughly and with such magnificent contempt that once Cowboy shut off the winch to make sure the second mate hadn't overlooked any of his forbears. "There was one got hung," Cowboy said. "Maybe he don't know about him."

But Mr. Smith was just shadow-boxing, as it were. When the seamen started throwing ropes between the two tankers, the second mate went full out. He never used the same cuss word twice and he never faltered but once. That was when he hollered down to Cowboy to ease up on the winch and Cowboy, who looked as if he wished he was back on the farm, got all excited and speeded up. That time Mr. Smith just beat his chest and made a loud noise. The ship's cook said he didn't know but if anyone asked him he'd say Mr. Smith was baying at the moon. The chief engineer said he'd never seen the second mate do that before.

It went on like that for about ten minutes. The high spot for me was when some sea-going blacksmith from Venezuela over on the other ship made a bad throw and wrapped his rope around Mr. Smith's neck. Without batting an eye, the second mate directed his megaphone toward the other ship and mutilated the whole crew in Spanish. It was superb.

When finally we got tied up, Mr. Smith came wearily down from the boat deck, looking as if he'd just delivered the message to Garcia, and shambled off to his quarters up forward. He didn't have his hat.

Later, some of us went up on the boat deck to look for Mr. Smith's hat but there wasn't a trace of it. Sometimes I think maybe Mr. Smith ate that hat.

But that's the way it was, and I've often wished Mr. Mencken could have heard Mr. Smith. I think Americans are the swearingest people on earth, and I think they do the job more forcefully and more colorfully than any other breed, and I believe the sage of Baltimore would have a higher opinion of American profanity had he been hanging around on the coast of Venezeula that day.

What Maine Augurs

By Ernest K. Lindley

Roosevelt To Get 332 Electoral Votes

REPUBLICANS have a right to feel cheered by their improved showing over 1932 and 1936 in Maine. But, unless the Maine barometer has fallen out of adjustment, the election results there this week do not portend a secure Republican victory in the national election in November. They augur, instead, either a neck-and-neck race for the Presidency or a comfortable victory for Roosevelt.

These assertions are based on the Bean formula, which was evolved from probably the most elaborate study of American election statistics ever made. As was set forth in an earlier column this formula enabled its author, Louis Bean, economist to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, to forecast at long range and with remarkable accuracy the outcome of the 1936 and 1938 elections and of the special Congressional elections held early this year.

As the Bean formula is built entirely on past experience, there can be no guarantee that it will prove accurate in this or later years. New factors may have crept in to upset entirely the relationship between the result of the Maine September election and the result of the November national election shown by past experience.

HOWEVER, HERE, for what it is worth, is the way the Bean formula works, as applied to the Maine election:

In the Presidential election of 1932, Roosevelt received 43.6 per cent of the Maine vote and 59.1 per cent of the total vote in the United States cast for the two major parties.

In 1936, Roosevelt received 42.8 per cent of the Maine vote, as against 62.2 per cent of the total vote in the Nation cast for the two major parties.

Thus in 1932, the Democratic Presidential vote in Maine was 15.5 points lower than the Democratic Presidential vote in the Nation, and in 1936 it was 19.4 points lower. In earlier elections the differential was smaller, but almost invariably the Democratic Party was substantially weaker in Maine than in the Nation as a whole. Recent experience suggests that to estimate the Democratic popular strength in the Nation as a whole, from 15 to 20 points should be added to the Democratic vote in Maine. (Usually in Maine, the two major parties split the vote in the September election just about the same as they do in November.)

IN THE MAINE election this year, the Democratic candidates received:

About 35 per cent of the vote for members of Congress.

About 36 per cent of the vote for Governor.

About 41 per cent of the vote for Senator:

These average about 37 per cent of the major party vote cast.

If the relationship between Maine and the Nation is about the same as it was in 1932, you would add about 15 points to the 37, making a total of 52 per cent. If the relationship is the same as in 1936, you would add about 19 points, making a total of 56 per cent.

By these calculations, the vote of the Nation as a whole would be from 52 to 56 per cent Democratic. This may be compared with the 62.2 per cent of the national two-party vote which Roosevelt received in 1936, and the 59.1 per cent which he received in 1932.

If the Democrats received only 52 per cent of the total popular vote, the result of the Presidential election in electoral votes probably will be extremely close. Judging from past experience, the Democrats will lose unless they get 52 per cent, or a fraction more, of the total popular vote. This is because they usually run up heavy majorities in the South, where they are not needed, but which go into the total figures.

If, on the other hand, Roosevelt gets 56 per cent of the popular vote, he should carry the electoral college by a landslide.

If you strike an average, and assume, from the Maine result, that Roosevelt will receive 54 per cent of the national popular vote, his electoral vote should be at least 332, against 199 for Willkie.

THIS IS NOT a forecast. It is only what the Maine barometer indicates, if it is working this year as it did in 1932 and 1936. The Republicans claim that bad weather held down the vote in the strongly Republican rural districts. It may be argued also that the Senatorial race should be disregarded, because the Democratic candidate, former Gov. Brann, is well known to be stronger than his party in Maine. However, Brann was a candidate in 1936 also, and his high vote—just a shade less than 50 per cent—was used, with the other results, in Bean's calculations.

The Maine election also showed that the Gallup Poll underestimated the Democratic strength. The error was slight—only about 2 per cent, well within the 4 per cent margin of error which Gallup frankly asserts that his sampling method may contain. However, if the Gallup Poll is underestimating the Democratic strength for the Nation as a whole by 2 points, Roosevelt is assured of a comfortable victory in November.

Interestingly, if the Democratic vote in the latest Gallup Poll is lifted by 2 per cent, the Nation becomes between 53 and 54 per cent Democratic—which is about what is indicated by the Bean formula, as applied to the Maine election.

450 Attend Picnic Of Young G. O. P. Unit

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (AP).—More than 450 persons, including former Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican nominee for United States Senator, attended a picnic near here yesterday sponsored by the Washington County Young Men's Republican League.

Representative Chester Gross, of the Twenty-secind Pennsylvania District, principal speaker, urged that all efforts be made to keep this country out of the European war. Walter Johnson, Sixth Congressional District candidate, was unable to attend due to a previous engagement in Montgomery County.

What Is Democracy?

SINCE THAT TIME, about a year ago, when the citizens of California went to the polls to vote down mob confiscation of private property and a further proposal to repeal the American form of government and elect a dictator I have intended to comb both the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence for any mention of the words "democracy" or "democratic."

Procrastination is no mere hobby but more nearly an occupation with me, so this task has not been accomplished until today, when I am able to report that the founding fathers, in their conservative wisdom, had no intention to found a democracy. On the contrary, they distinctly affirmed their determination to "guarantee to every State a republican form of government." Nowhere in either document will you find any reference to democracy, and the experiences of the Californians who, twice in three years, had to whip themselves into a swivet to save their subrepublic from destruction by the democratic process vindicate the judgment of those early patriots.

Unlike us who thoughtlessly permitted ourselves to glorify democracy in the days of 1917-18, not pausing to examine whereof we prattled, and who have continued ever since to praise the name of a system which would be fatal to our freedom, the founders of the Nation pointedly rejected it.

DEMOCRACY IS NOT a representative form of government, and, on reflection, the reasons become apparent why the Nazis and Fascists ridicule us for our ignorance in extolling a system which we do not practice and would hate as fiercely as they do, should we try. When we say "democracy" we don't know what we are talking about, but they do, and, giving us credit for more sense than we possess, they think we must be crazy, when we are only ignorant.

We have confused ourselves and fallen victims to the ballyhoo of the party which was in power during the first World War and which used its own misnomer as an ideal and tocsin. That party never has attempted to practice democracy, and, even now, in its trend to national socialism would not dare advocate democracy except as a catchword and in the knowledge that the people never have paused to examine its meaning.

We live under a superstition that democracy is the guarantee of the republican liberties which exist nowhere else in the world but in this Republic. The Communists, naturally, have urged us toward democratic follies, knowing that it is unworkable in a land as vast and having so large a population as this one.

THAT WAS THE REASON why in California the Communist Party and the Communist C. I. O. indorsed and worked for a 15,000-word amendment to the State constitution which would have named a dictator, abolished all rights guaranteed and preserved only by the republican system and caused a ghastly brawl.

The initiative and referendum was looked upon as a sound reform 25 years ago, and certainly the intent was good. But in practice the business of by-passing the Legislature and referring long and complex issues to the voters is a menace to the very right to vote.

The American system intends that the people shall elect representatives who—God help us—are presumed to be men of conscience, patriotism and somewhat superior intelligence. It is presumed, moreover, that these elected agents will have the time, the mental equipment and the character to consider wisely measures proposed in the proper place and make the laws with due regard for the liberties of those whom they represent. The fact that they have been guilty of many failures and much neglect is no reason for believing that the mass of voters would do as well. On the contrary, as the founding fathers knew, the voters have other things to think of and, not to flatter them, need protection from their own emotions and cupidity and the deceptions of persuasive but leering liars.

DEMOCRACY CONTAINS the process by which American freedom can be repealed utterly in the adoption, under emotional stress, of a measure disguised as California's ham 'n' eggs was, in the gaudy colors of something for nothing. And the liberties of the ham 'n' eggers in California were saved for them only by a two-to-one vote of those whom the ham 'n' eggers hated as oppressors.

Never was a people so gulled as the Americans are by the word "democracy," the whole case constituting a hell of a commentary on the educational system of a nation having almost as many seats of learning as saloons.

Lady Paish Tells What She Thinks Of Sen. Wheeler

Seattle, Sept. 12 (AP).—Lady Anita Carolyn Paish, American-born wife of Sir George Paish, British economist recently criticized in the Senate for his activities in this country, voiced her views on the matter today.

She is visiting here after a summer vacation in British Columbia.

In Washington, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said he believed Sir George was a British propagandist. A Senate discussion followed.

"Comment!" Lady Paish told an interviewer. "Of course, I'll comment. Who is this Senator Wheeler? What is he trying to do?

"Is he so brilliant that he is going to decide what we should listen to? I'm an American and it burns me up."

George Sand's France

HISTORY never repeats itself, but it cuts some entertaining spirals; and the spiral of our day gives the wildly romantic story of "George Sand" and her France fresh relevance. Felizia Seyd, German-born, Swiss by marriage, American by choice, has deftly brought the story back to life in "Romantic Rebel: The Life and Times of George Sand" (Viking, $3).

George Sand incorporated in her career most of the fantastically complicated currents which look so simple when we label the bundle "France." She was the barely legitimate (her parents married a month before her birth) daughter of the legitimate son of an illegitimate daughter of the illegitimate son of a King of Poland, and since she was brought up mostly by her grandmother, who bore a title, she grew up in the shadow of eighteenth-century aristocracy. But her father, Maurice de Saxe, had deserted aristocracy for the Revolution; he was a lieutenant in the Republican army when he fell head over heels in love with the girl he married, the daughter of a poolroom keeper, who fell as madly in love with him. This Sophie was the mistress of a general when she gave up wealth for love and Maurice; she was glad to make hats to support herself, following him from camp to camp. . . . So George Sand came legitimatelyby her taste for romance and for rebellion.

She was born in 1804, and at 17, when Europe still lay in the shadow of its 20-year war, she was married to the illegitimate son of a French baron. In the next seven years she had two children by her husband and a five-year highly platonic love affair with a lawyer. Then she broke loose.

It was an age of cynicism and reaction, and George Sand's pale, ardent, nervous, post-Napoleonic generation at first expressed its rebellion in defying petty conventions. "George Sand"—she was then still Aurore Dudevant—adopted men's clothes, although, as Felizia Seyd explains, this was in part a rational means to an end. George Sand wanted to get about Paris, and she did not have the money for a coach. Heavy men's boots and a long overcoat over trousers facilitated locomotion in the muddy, unpaved Paris of 1830. Also she was a determined Bohemian; almost at once she set up common quarters with a poet (seven years her junior) whom she described in her letters to him as her "graceful and amiable humming bird of the savannahs." Not that she had ever seen a humming bird; she was never a realist.

She wrote her first novel in collaboration with this pale poet; her second she signed with the pseudonym, George Sand, which became a European byword. "Lelia" was the ecstatic and somewhat incoherent story of her own personal rebellion. It was a belated feminine "Werther;" it was a fevered expression of the sick youth of a sick age; it was a cry for a satisfying love; and it swept France.

THE POET left her; George Sand experimented at love with Merimee, who was too much the man of the world for her; then, partly on advice of the critics, Sainte-Beuve, deliberately tumbled into love with a poet who shared her own genius and fever—Alfred de Musset, the very type of golden youth of genius. He was six years her junior, and a spoiled child who needed a mother. But he wrote poetry in spasms only; and when George took him to Venice, he complained bitterly of the systematic industry which kept her at her desk for hours at a time. "I am an artist, not an artisan," he complained. "I cannot produce literature by the yard."

George Sand could. For four decades she wrote religiously, several novels a year, almost always expressing the Zeitgeist.

She sighed, and Musset sighed; they exchanged diaries, and Musset lent hers to a friend, who copied it, and so supplied material for a venomous book. "He and She," written by Musset's brother. George fell in love also with Musset's doctor, and told Musset all about it. Returning to Paris, she fell in love with the revolutionary movement, and with a Republican lawyer. Next she shared a menage with Liszt, the great composer, and with the married Countess who had shocked Paris by eloping with Listz. They lived in the clouds; registering with the Swiss police, George said her residence was Nature; she was traveling from God to Heaven; and Liszt registered as born on Parnassus, and traveling from Doubt to Truth. Then George Sand came under the influence of Lamennais, the anticlerical cleric; and then she met and stormily adopted the anemic, fastidious Chopin. . . And all the time she wrote her life and her dreams into her books, which shocked, delighted and enthralled.

"She was great and kind," says Felizia Seyd, "and admirably transmitted that most vital impulse of the French nation, aiming always to raise the level of justice, understanding and human dignity." Today her faith, which shone clear through the most depressing decades of her century, has a new reassurance; and her rebellions seem strangely familiar and contemporary. . . . Felizia Seyd has made George Sand our contemporary, which is the sufficient justification of a new biography.

D. C. Population Rises by 176,000 In Last 10 Years

The Capital's population jumped more than 176,000 in the last 10 years to a present total of 663,153 while even faster growing suburban areas contributed to a metropolitan area count of nearly 1,000,000, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Washington and the outlying areas including Alexandria, Va., Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland had a population of 962,742 on April 1, according to the census. The increase over the 672,198 of 1930 was 43 per cent compared with an increase of only 17.5 per cent in the previous 10 years.

Population figures for nearby areas are: Montgomery, 81,444; Prince Georges, 87,177; Alexandria, 33,800; Arlington, 56,500, and Fairfax, 40,668.

Hurricane Feared Nearing Bahamas

Miami, Fla., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—A tropical storm with winds of full hurricane force over a considerable area near its center was reported to be moving west-northwestward tonight through the Atlantic Ocean toward the southern fringe of the Bahama Islands.

In an advisory issued at 9:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time) the warning system said the hurricane may take "a slow turn to the north-westward," which might carry its center away from the Bahamas.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

'School Daze, School Daze'

The public schools are opening again and millions of children will give up playing outdoors and start fooling in the schoolrooms.

They had a lot of fun during the vacation, but weren't anywhere near as idle as they will be when they get back to their studies.

Whether the children have been getting the right sort of education is now a question agitating many nations. That many of the weaknesses in social systems are due to emphasis on the wrong things in school is widely charged. France declares, through Marshal Petain, that its public-school system was "a lie," and says that from now on schools will teach "respect of the human individual, the family, society and the nation."

France has blamed about everything else for its defeat and it may be stretching a point to blame the schools, but this department thinks a little shaking up of the American public school system wouldn't do us any harm.

If Uncle Sam's schools are teaching American boys and girls respect for the family, society and the Nation, a lot of the kids are not listening. (There we go preaching again.)

How about getting back to the old-fashioned days when school was opened with prayer and the national anthem, with teacher supplying the inspiration?

The schools are instructing the kids in dates that don't matter, historical episodes that they will never remember and various subjects which will be of little use to 'em. The only exam they pass quickly is the one which asks, "What was Jimmy Cagney's last picture"? "Name four night clubs most often mentioned in the press," and "What six movie stars were divorced in the last ten days"?

The surest way to get knocked down and trampled on in New York is to try to get into a subway train at a station when the nearest school is just letting out. If those young Americans have been getting instruction in anything except how to be ruffians in ten easy lessons it is not apparent to grown-ups.

They may still bring apples to teacher, but their attitude is nuts to the general public.

If the schools are still teaching reading', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic they must be throwing in a little jujitsu, rough and tumble fighting, Indian war cries and general disdain for good manners.

The three R's would seem to be Robinson, Rooney and Romero.

Of course, the schools may not be entirely to blame for the fact that little boys grow up into men who yawn as a veterans' parade passes, give a sloppy salute to Old Glory and say "So what!" when told that democracy is in danger.

The old folks at home have something to do with it. Pop never read the Declaration of Independence, thinks Magna Charta is a new screen actress, believes it okay for the Government to attend to everything and never says grace at meals. (Voice: Who are you to talk?)

And mom is too busy between bridge, the screen scandals, bingo and her efforts to get the right face cream that she isn't much help to the kids either. (So we hear.)

D. C. Mormons Plan Aid to Poor

Members of the Washington Church of the Latter Day Saints conferred last night with J. Reuben Clark, first Councilor in the Presidency of the Church and former Undersecretary of State, on means of putting a church relief plan into effect.

It was decided to conduct a survey of the economic conditions of church members in the State which includes Washington and Baltimore, and the territory between Fredericksburg, Va., and Waynesboro, Pa. There are nearly 3,000 members in the State.

Members stated at the meeting that they wish to give unemployed members of the church work, and perhaps bring relief to other areas.

Nearing The Climax

By Barnet Nover

Britain Anticipates Invasion

IN HIS LATEST speech Winston Churchill placed great but probably not unjustified emphasis on Britain's strength. But he did not minimize the strength of the enemy. On the contrary, he warned his countrymen that the fearful days they have been living through may be only the prelude to something far worse. For once again, as in the days of the Spanish Armada and the Grande Armee assembled by Napoleon at Boulogne in 1803, Great Britain faces the supreme test of invasion.

Now ever since the fall of France and even before that world-anaking event occurred, military experts have been debating the question whether Hitler would really attempt to send an army across the narrow waters separating the European mainland from the British Isles.

It happens to be a well-understood principle in military science that no venture in wartime is as fraught with risk as a landing in force. Gallipoli is but one of many instances in history to prove this. Thus there have been some who have argued that the German invasion threats of last May and June and since have been largely bluff, that Hitler would seek other methods by which to bring Britain to her knees.

CERTAINLY a Nazi invasion of England that did not quite come off would mean more than the loss of the German troops that had been engaged in such an attempt. It could very easily mean the beginning of the end of Hitler and his regime.

It would prove, in the first place, that Hitler was not, and the German wehrmacht was not, invincible, and that might have disastrous consequences to the Nazi regime. For the belief that Hitler was an invincible force has played a part in every one of his conquests, has kept the dissident elements in Germany in line, and also has made easier the continued subjugation of the captive peoples now living under Nazi rule. Once the bubble of invincibility was shattered it could probably never be restored.

Nor could Hitler comfort himself and his people for the failure of an invasion attempt by a Dunkerque evacuation. Without sea power, the German troops cut off from their mainland bases would be at the mercy of the defending armies, forced to choose between surrendering or dying in their tracks.

BUT IF AN INVASION is fraught with danger there is danger as well in any alternative Hitler might attempt. A blockade of Great Britain might do the trick if Germany did not have to worry about the time element; if there were any assurance that through submarines, mines and air power she could smash the British fleet; if there was not the dangerous fact to be reckoned with that in a long war the first nation to collapse might not be Great Britain, but Italy. In a very real sense, Mussolini is Hitler's Achilles' heel.

Another alternative and one which Hitler is now attempting, is to smash the British by means of concentrated attacks from the air. Carried out on a large enough scale and over a sufficient period of time British industrial power might be smashed and her will to fight on broken. There is no certainity that Hitler will proceed from his present efforts to an actual invasion. But they must be more successful than they appear to have been thus far to make such an invasion anything but an extremely dangerous and expensive undertaking.

IT IS APPARENT that the Germans have not yet succeeded in achieving mastery of the skies over Great Britain. Their bombers have inflicted a tremendous amount of damage, made tens of thousands homeless and killed a large numbers of civilians. But after six days of daily and nightly raids on the British metropolis, the British antiaircraft guns have not yet been silenced, the British fighters continue to claw down large numbers of enemy planes and the morale of the people of London is unbroken.

We do not know, however, and there is no way of knowing, to what extent Great Britain has been weakened by these ferocious assaults as against the capacity of Germany to continue them. Hitler may reckon that despite the failure of his wehrmacht to knock out the Royal Air Force entirely, as it knocked out the Polish air force a year ago, he has softened the British sufficiently to make an invasion potentially successful. Or he may feel that the invasion had better take place before the losses of German planes and pilots would make it impossible to give the troops that could be landed on British soil adequate aerial support.

IN ANY EVENT, Churchill's sources of information have led him to believe that an invasion may be near at hand.

The British have not been entirely on the defensive during these days and weeks. They have hit back at many German centers. But their offensive power has not been adequate to prevent large German concentrations of ships and men at a great many strategic points along the European coast—all the way from Norway to Brest.

Whether the British can prevent the invading forces from setting out is another matter. The next days may tell. Now, as at all times since he embarked on his career as conqueror, Hitler is a man possessed by a demon. He cannot wait. But never before has he faced so doughty an opponent.

Green Commends Roosevelt Record

Rogersville, Tenn., Sept. 12 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, Wednesday night commended President Roosevelt's efforts to relieve unemployment.

Speaking before the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America, Green declared:

"There are some who have charged the honored President of the United States with having failed to do all that he could to relieve unemployment in the United States.

"I want to throw that charge back in their faces, because I know the President has done all within his power to relieve unemployment in America."

Milk Strife Flares Anew In House

Schulte Criticizes Seal for Taking Dairy Group Job, Charges 'Sell-Out'

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday charged that the House District Committee had been "sold down the river" during the 1939 milk investigation because of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal's announcement that he would become general counsel of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

"Many members who are lawyers read the account in the newspapers of our good friend, the corporation counsel, was resigning to join the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association that he was supposed to be fighting, and were dumfounded," Schulte told the House.

Schulte and Seal clashed frequently during the House milk inquiry and several times very nearly came to blows. The Hoosier broke away from the general investigation before it ended and conducted a separate inquiry.

Representative Gross (Republican), of Pennsylvania, interrupted Schulte several times and later obtained permission to address the House for 20 minutes on Monday in reply.

Schulte concluded that "there is not a Chinaman's chance of getting any place trying to break up this milk monopoly unless we can get some agency of the Federal Government to go in and break it up."

He suggested that the "only way to solve the problem is to give the District suffrage whether we like it or not.

"If we are going to be honest and fair with the people of the District, they must have suffrage so that they can clean out that building downtown they call the city hall from one end to the other," he declared.

Seal last night refused to comment on the Congressman's charges.

Self-Help Bureau Finds 751 Jobs

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, executive director, yesterday announced that the Washington Self-Help Exchange, from April through August had found 698 temporary and 53 permanent jobs for participants of the exchange.

The following committee chairmen for 1940-41 were named by Hugh V. Keiser, president; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, membership; Robert Woods Bliss, finance; Claude Owen, farm; Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly, professional services; Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, salvage; Lewis T. Breuninger, housing; Mrs. Thomas Parran, public relations.

Capital News in Brief

Invasion of U. S. Held Too Costly for Nazis

The great cost to Germany of invading Norway should reassure Americans who fear a thrust in this direction, Benjamin McCartney told the Reciprocity Club last night in a talk on his observations during the Norwegian campaign.

McCartney, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. McCartney, returned recently on the American Legion. He spoke at the club's first evening dinner of the fall at the Mayflower Hotel, with William J. Mileham, vice president, presiding.

The announcement, which went around to members in advance of the dinner, gave the bantering information that it would celebrate "the anniversary of the birth of Clark Gable and the Battle of Marathon."

'Over Forty Club' To Frolic Tonight

The Friendship Club of the local branch of Americans Over 40 will meet tonight for an evening of games and entertainment starting at 8 p. m. in the parish hall of Epiphany Church, 1317 G street northwest.

Mrs. Gracia Owens, Mrs. Delphine Smith, and Mrs. Mattie Cake, will be the hostesses. Chinese checkers and ping pong are among games scheduled.

D. C. Artist Buys Patuxent Manor Complete With 'Ghost'

Lower Marlboro, Md., Sept. 12. (AP).—Patuxent Manor, historic Calvert County landmark associated with George Washington and complete with its "ghost," has been purchased by Donald McAfee, Washington and Raleigh, N. C., artist.

McAfee plans to restore to its original appearance the one and a half story brick structure built in 1742 for Charles Grahame, of Scotland. It is located on the Patuxent River.

George Washington spent a night at Patuxent Manor to break his journey to Philadelphia to report to the Continental Congress on his victory over the British in the Revolutionary War. Thomas Jefferson also was a visitor there.

Authority for the "ghost" legend is Ralph Hinman, of Lower Marlboro. He said tradition had it that a sea captain planted a holly tree in the yard and declared that if anyone harmed it after his death he would return and punish the offender.

Years after his death, when the house had changed hands, one of the occupants cut down the tree. Then, the legend continues, the old sea captain's "ghost" returned one stormy night and pronounced the death sentence on the tree cutter, who died of a strange malady.

Nervous Bandit Shakes Down Register for $20

A pale, nervous youth, about 18, entered a High's Ice Cream store at 1000 Fourth street northeast last night.

Maddine Orris, 24, of 258 Kentucky avenue southeast, and Mary Wulforst, of 1011 Bryant street northeast, in charge of the store, looked up at him.

"What are you shaking for?" one of them asked.

"You'd be hungry, too, if you only had 20 cents between you and starvation," he replied. He ordered a 10-cent box of ice cream.

As it was handed to him, he drew a pistol, forced the two into a back room, and took between $15 and $20.

"And we were tempted to give him something to eat; he looked so hungry," Miss Orris said.

The convention elected William P. Rutledge, of Wyandotte, Mich., president emeritus and voted to hold the 1941 convention in Buffalo.

Fighting for his life in Casualty Hospital last night was 16-year-old Richard Honig, of Cottage City, Md., whose bicycle was struck by an auto on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, Cottage City. He was taken to Casualty Hospital with fractures of both legs and head injuries. Police listed the driver as George Gray, of Brandywine, Md., and released him on bond, pending outcome of the youth's injuries.

Seriously hurt was Joseph A. Wathen, 13, of 541 Fifteenth street northeast, when he lost control of his wheel at Sixteenth and Isherwood streets northeast and ran into an iron post. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, suffering from severe head injuries.

Eleven-year-old Joseph L. Curtis, jr., colored, of 2304 Seventeenth street northwest, and his 7-year-old sister, Alice Mae, were brought to Freedmen's Hospital after their bicycle was knocked down at Kalorama road and Champlain streets northwest. Joseph suffered injuries to the right leg and Alice Mae, who was riding in back, received a broken left leg. Operator of the auto, police said, was Joseph E. Overstreet, 26, of 505 Tenth street southeast.

Patricia Thornton, 4, colored, of 131 N street southeast, sustained head injuries when hit by auto near her home. She was rushed to Providence Hospital. The driver, George W. Taylor, 21, colored, of 66 N street southeast, was charged with having "bad foot brakes."

Turmoil Abroad Brings Run of D. C. 'Good-byes'

Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi Plan to Leave Before End of Month; Capital Awaits Pan American Contingent

By Hope Ridings Miller

"HAIL AND FAREWELL," voiced nowhere more often than in Washington, is playing on the latter theme much too frequently these days. Season in and season out, Capital society has blithely waved good-bye with one hand and welcomed newcomers with the other—but never with the tense regularity you can expect in the next few weeks.

Hope Ridings Miller

Departing diplomats, recalled to their countries for change of post or because of shifting governments, are being feted with the usual fanfare. In more than one instance, however, their leave-taking is fraught with unusual apprehension, and wining and dining in their honor is, therefore, kept off the record as much as possible.

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi will be off before the end of this month. News that the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu, was to be recalled has come straight from Bucharest, although he has not yet been officially notified. The former French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, has already left Washington, as you know, and a flock of other diplomats also are slated for new posts.

Count de Saint Quentin, who is now in New York and will sail home soon, was besieged with invitations before he left. Only in a few instances, however, would he allow himself to be entertained in a manner befitting a popular departing envoy; and then, there were careful stipulations that there was to be as little said about the parties as possible.

IN LESS NOTICEABLE degree, the same policy is being followed in regard to fetes for Keith Officer, retiring Australian Counselor, who will be off to Tokyo in a few days. However, it may be mentioned that he was guest of honor at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon and also at a small dinner last night. Both were stag fetes, and the latter was given by the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian.

Next on the list of departing diplomats will be the retiring Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi, who in a little less than two years have made a host of friends here. They will leave for the West Coast on September 24 and will sail directly for their homeland.

Meanwhile, they are planning a farewell social calendar that will include an "at home" on the afternoon of September 19 and a series of small, informal dinners.

COMING TO WASHINGTON in October, 1938, Kensuke Horinouchi took over his new duties with a skill acquired in almost 30 years of diplomatic service in Europe, Asia and America. As everybody knows, the job of handling Japanese affairs here the past two years has been a difficult one, but he and his attractive wife have acquitted themselves in a manner that will cause their going to be a source of special regret in Capital circles.

Parties at the Japanese Embassy, and there have been many since the Horinouchis arrived, were enhanced by the fact that the hostess frequently appeared in native dress. One costume I remember especially was designed by Mme. Horinouchi herself. It was of soft dove-gray silk fading into a lighter shade in the straight skirt, which was decorated with a landscape scene in pastel colors. No Japanese frock would be complete without an obi, of course, and the one for this model was heavily embroidered with a design of plum blossoms and pine.

I do hope the next hostess at the Japanese Embassy follows Mme. Horinouchi's custom and appears in native robes as often as possible.

ON THE CALENDAR: Farewell fetes are not the only ones that will have official society out and about in the next few weeks. Don't forget that two officers from armies of each of the 20 Pan-American republics are coming to the Capital next month and will be entertained with a gala round of parties. The first group is due in town around October 1; the second, will be along a couple of weeks later. An impressive program is being mapped out for them, details of which you'll be hearing soon.

VITAL STATISTICS: It hasn't been decided yet, but friends of Mr. and Mrs. Forrester Davison are wagering that their new daughter, born Tuesday at Garfield Hospital, will be named Alice. Mrs. Davison is the former Alice Tweedy. Her mother was named Alice and so was her grandmother. Chances, therefore, seem about three to one that young Miss Davison turns out to be an Alice, too.

Miss Cuthbert August Bride

News has been received here of the recent marriage of Miss Alice Cuthbert, daughter of Mayor Grange Cuthbert and Mrs. Cuthbert, of Summerville, S. C., to Bacot Allston, of Charleston, S. C. The ceremony took place last month at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Summerville, the Rev. F. W. Ambler officiating.

The bride, who is the granddaughter of the late A. S. Lattimer, Senator from South Carolina, frequently visited her aunts, Mrs. James Patten and Mrs. Robert C. Watson, of Washington.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon Speaks in New York

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, who is serving as chairman of the New York Metropolitan Women's Division of the Republican National Committee, was among the speakers at a luncheon on Wednesday at the Hotel Roosevelt in Manhattan.

Also a speaker was Miss Marion Martin, head of the women's division of the Republican Nation Committee. Miss Martin's headquarters are in Washington but the Capital has seen little of her since the campaign opened.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan have returned to Washington after a visit to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Porter Conger, of 8000 West Beach drive, announce the birth of a daughter September 8 at Doctors Hospital. They have another daughter, Joan.

J. Forbes Amory, who underwent an operation at Walter Reed Hospital on his return two weeks ago from British Guiana, is now convalescing and may see his friends at the hospital.

The Misses Anne Powel Randolph and Mary Randolph will spend the autumn at Bateman's in Newport.

Mrs. Harry Wardman, of 2433 Massachusetts avenue, is spending a few days in New York and is staying at the Ritz.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

RESTING UP after a vacation is quite the vogue, and the attractive Meuser girls—Marjorie and Isabelle—are planning to do just that. They will spend two weeks at the Homestead in Hot Springs, catching up on their sleep after a gay summer at Newport. After that they will decide where to settle down for the winter. Their many Capital friends hope that Washington will be their choice, but I hear that Chicago is also under discussion.

Mrs. William P. MacCracken, also just back from a summer vacation, has whisked off to Philadelphia for a brief stay. She will be back in town either tomorrow or Sunday.

M. and Mme. Georges Coulon have rented Mrs. Higginson Rogers' charming little house in Georgetown, the little house which Mrs. Rogers had done over by George Howe last spring. The Coulons asked friends in for an informal house-warming the minute they were settled and also started off life in their new home with a house guest.

The Coulon's guest Stephanie Pell, who has been laid low most of the summer because of an operation on her knee, has just said what she fervently hopes is a permanent farewell to the hospital. She is recuperating under the watchful eyes of pretty little Mme. Coulon. When she has thoroughly recovered, Stephanie expects to take up some post-graduate work at Miss Madiera's School from which she was graduated last June.

SPEAKING OF classes, Cynthia Davis, daughter of Dwight F. Davis, has been learning to fly with the Women Flyers of America. She has already soloed and will soon be in line for a pilot's license.

Rebecca Wellington has returned to Washington after a holiday in the North, where she visited Senator and Mrs. Cabot Lodge at their summer home at Beverly, Mass.

Countess van Rechteren Limpurg asked a few friends in the other afternoon to meet the new Minister-Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, Willem van Boetzelaer van Oosterhaut. Cocktails were served in the garden where Fay van Rechteren has only to stick seeds into the ground to have them spring up into blossoms. The van Rechterens will soon be moving from their house on Wyoming avenue. Thank goodness, they will not be leaving Washington — and everyone hoped that house-warming for their new abode was more in their thoughts than farewell to their old one.

Among those who dropped in to welcome Mr. Van Boetzelaer were the First Secretary of the Netherlands Legation, Dr. H. R. van Houten and Mme. Van Houten, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Stephanus Morris and Jacques de Thier.

Maxine Kahn Wed in Shoreham Ceremony to Raymond Gerber

The wedding of Miss Maxine Kahn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marx Kahn, of 1700 Lanier place, to Raymond Gerber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gerber, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Shoreham. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld officiated in a setting of palms and tall standards of white flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore ivory satin made on empire lines and an ivory tulle veil, with a cap of seed pearls and orange blossoms arranged as a coronet. She carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Samuel S. Silverman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, gowned in blue fitted velveteen, with a matching hair wreath and carrying blue delphiniums and yellow roses. Miss Julia Paul, the maid of honor, was in rose velveteeen, and Faith Silverman, the bride's niece, was flower girl. She chose flowered pink taffeta and carried a colonial bouquet of roses, delphiniums and baby's breath.

Robert Silverman, of Washington was best man, and the ushers were Robert Goldstein, Dr. Ellis April, Lester Cohen and Joseph Francke.

A buffet supper followed the ceremony. Mrs. Kahn wore wine lace with a picture hat to match and the bridegroom's mother was in powder blue crepe with a velvet hat of the same shade.

After a wedding trip to New York, the couple will live in Washington. As her going away costume the bride chose a black wool dress trimmed with ocelot and a corsage of white orchids.

Mrs. Gerber attended George Washington University, where she is a member of Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority. Mr. Gerber studied at the University of Virginia and Georgetown University. He is a member of Phi Alpha Fraternity and the District of Columbia Bar Association.

Mrs. Vandergrift Fetes Houst Guest, Mrs. Cunningham

Mrs. Alexander A. Vandergrift, wife of Col. Vandergrift, of the Marine Corps, entertained a company of 20 at luncheon yesterday in the Louise Seize room of the Shoreham.

The luncheon was for Mrs. Alfred A. Cunningham, of Sarasota, Fla., who is a house guest of Col. and Mrs. Vandergrift. Also in the company was Mrs. Edmund Clubb, who is visiting here from Shanghai, where her husband is stationed in the diplomatic service. Col. and Mrs. Vandergrift met Mr. and Mrs. Clubb in China when the colonel was stationed there. A centerpiece of red gladiolas was Mrs. Vanderdrift's only decoration on her long luncheon table.

Mrs. Snow, Daughter, Back From Wyoming

Mrs. Sims Snow and her daughter, Claire, who spent the summer on a Wyoming ranch, have returned to Washington.

They are temporarily in their Georgetown apartment but expect to move soon. Just what their new address will be has not yet been decided.

Mrs. Baxter, Judge Goodrich Will Marry

Former Mary Dern And Appeals Jurist To Wed on Sept. 23

Of wide interest is the announcement by Mrs. George H. Dern of the engagement of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Dern Baxter, to Judge Herbert Frank Goodrich, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Baxter is the widow of Harry Baxter and the daughter of the late George H. Dern, Secretary of War in the early years of President Roosevelt's Administration. Since his death, his family has been making their home in Washington and are now at 2118 Bancroft place. There the wedding will take place September 23.

Judge Goodrich is a member of the United States Court of Appeals of the Third Judicial District and is a former dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. His fiancee is a popular member of Capital society.

British Relief Workers Feted

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman was hostess at a luncheon yesterday at the Mount Vernon Country Club. Her guests are all actively interested in British relief work and Mrs. Tuckerman has recently been appointed head of the British-American Ambulance Association for the Baltimore and Washington districts. One of her guests, Mrs. S. Richardson, has just taken over her post as chairman for the Baltimore Bundles for Britain unit.

Other guests were Mrs. Tunstall Smith, Mrs. Bruce Cotten, Mrs. Huntington Williams, Mrs. Garland Tinsley and Mrs. H. Pott, wife of the new British naval attache, Rear Admiral Pott.

Mrs. Tuckerman's debutante daughter, Miss Margaret Carey Tuckerman, left last evening for Baltimore with Miss Elizabeth Stewart Richardson, where she was hostess at a dinner at the Baltimore Country Club, which preceded the debut of Miss Catherine Hunt France.

Miss Tuckerman recently returned from Philadelphia, where she had gone to attend debutante festivities. Among the coming-out parties at which she was present were the dinner-dance of Miss Dorothy Hallowell, given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Hallowell, and the ball at Chestnut Hill at which Miss Nancy Ritchie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Luther Ritchie, made her bow to society.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Hoopes announce the birth of a daughter, their third child, September 8 at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Hoopes is the daughter of Rudger Clawson, president of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

WITH OR WITHOUT a Willkie victory, the town is going to be full of new faces this winter—and many of them Republican. One of the most attractive is that of Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker, who, with her husband, has leased the Franklin Mott Gunther home in Georgetown.

The former Beatrice Patterson, of Philadelphia, blonde, blue eyed Mrs. Wanamaker, is known for both her good looks and chic. She and her husband were married a little over a year ago in Southampton and have a tiny baby. In New York they live in an attractvie apartment on East End avenue. Mrs. Wanamaker's chief hobby is old furniture and Lowestoft china, of which she has quite a collection.

HER HUSBAND, a member of the aviation reserve, is working with Rear Admiral John Towers, chief of aeronautics. In the process of leasing the Gunther home, the cables flew back and forth between here and Bucharest, where Mr. Gunther is Minister. His home on N street is one of the oldest in Washington, a big red brick residence flush with the street but with a garden stretching way out behind. Last year the house was occupied by John Hanes, then Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Hanes.

MANY AMERICAN diplomats forced to return from the blitzkreiged countries are settling in Washington this fall. Among them is Orme Wilson, who was Counselor of our Brussels Embassy, and Mrs. Wilson.

The wife of our Charge d'Affaires at Rome, Mrs. Edward Reed, has signed up for a house on Tracy place. She came back to the United States when Italy's entrance into the war seemed imminent and has been summering in the Adirondacks with occasional visits to Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffmanns are among New Yorkers coming here for the winter. And Maj. and Mrs. Richard Davidson have returned after an absence of several years—she is the former Betty Hanna.

HOSTESSES WILL BE even harder put to it than ever to find that extra man. The women promise to outnumber the men even more than usual here, what with so many wives seeking refuge in the Capital while their husbands remain abroad.

Mrs. Roger Makins, whose husband is a British diplomat, will join her father, Dwight Davis, and Mrs. Davis this winter. The Davises will close their Southampton home, Bayberry Land, next week, and Mrs. Davis plans to visit Saratoga before opening her Decatur place residence.

It will be remembered that just after the war broke out last fall the Davises dashed to London by Clipper to rescue the Makins children. But they returned without them, Mrs. Makins preferring to keep the family intact until the situation became acutely dangerous. She has been at Southampton with the Davises for most of the summer.

GOOD NEWS to everyone who knows them will be the return of Beatrice Phillips, daughter of our Ambassador to Italy. With Theodora Sedgwick, whose father, Ellery, formerly edited the Atlantic Monthly, she has taken an apartment at the Fairfax. Both spent last winter in Washington and will return in October. Since coming back from France, where she drove an ambulance for Miss Anne Morgan, Beatrice has been with her family in Beverly, Mass.

AMONG THE many planning farewell parties for Keith Officer are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. They will give a dinner for him next week.

Miss McKenney Sets the Date

The wedding of Miss Francesca McKenney, of Washington, and Bradford Steele Magill, of New York, will take place on Friday, September 20. Only members of the two families will witness the ceremony, which will be performed at Handley Hall, the Maryland residence of Miss McKenney's uncle, Frederic D. McKenney.

Mr. Magill has joined his fiancee here for the week-end, and they will be honored on Sunday at a cocktail party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. James Reid. Miss McKenney is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Albert McKenney, of Washington, and the late Mr. McKenney, and Mr. Magill is the son of Mrs. Louis J. Magill and the late Col. Magill, U. S. M. C.

Mrs. Wallace, Jean Return From Trip To Des Moines

Back in their apartments at the Wardman Park Hotel are two official hostesses who have spent the summer away from Washington, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, and their daughter, Jean, arrived a few days ago from their home in Des Moines.

Also returning recently were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, and her daughter, Mary Margaret, who came down from their home in Jamestown, N. Y.

Miss Wallace and Miss Jackson, who made their bows to society at the same party last winter, will leave on the same day, September 23, for college. Miss Wallace will enter her sophomore year at Connecticut College, while Miss Jackson will be a junior at Smith College.

Poland's Envoy Back From N. Y.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, returned yesterday from a brief stay in New York.

The Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewski are enjoying a vacation in the North. They will return to Washington next Thursday.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Truthtown uppercrusters who have returned to town are relaxing from their vacations and puting themselves in form for the fall social season.

Many of the town's newcomers are enrolling in the class in cocktail shaking that Mrs. Gillespie Hardpann has started. (Mr. Hardpann recently filed proceedings in bankruptcy), and Mrs. Caleb Fossill, jr., has opened her recreation room in her Glacier Height's mansion for rolling exercises to a group of young matrons who went without their girdles this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Mushroom have enrolled in a correspondence course in fox hunting, and Mrs. Elspeth Ermine is studying parliamentary law with a view to organizing a new war relief society.

The Beetle Touch

Guests gathered at the fashionable Church of the Pharisees in St. Stafford Wood Wednesday to witness the wedding of glamour deb, Mimi Walrus, and Huntington Hosea Bettle, jr., received a shock as the wedding party approached the altar.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown and a lace veil belonging to her grandmother, while the bridegroom was attired in the wedding frock coat of his great grandfather. He also wore a fancy vest and a high stock collar with necktie in muffler effect. Some artificial sideburns had been added for the occasion.

The Rev. Pillsbury Banal, who performed the ceremony, almost lost his poise for a moment as the wedding party assembled, but quickly regained his self control and intoned the service in his best basso.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, Truthtown's eccentric dowager who keeps socialties here continually in hot water, is said to have insisted that her grandson wear his great grandfather's outfit under penalty of cutting off his inheritance. While the dowager refused to confirm the latter part of the report yesterday she admitted planning the surprise.

"I was simply fed up," she said, "with reading of bride's publicizing their antiques and family trees at weddings. I wanted my grandson to show he also had an ancestor."

Stag Line Fatality

Truthtown hostesses have sustained a blow in the news that Waring DeWith Monicker, their most dependable extra man of the last 40 years, is to forsake his bachelor role to marry Miss Julie Hortense Luker, glamour deb of last season and daughter of the Reginald Lukers.

Miss Luker will inherit a fortune estimated at several millions from the estate of her grandfather, the late Erasmus Doodle, Hollandaise sauce magnate.

The Bride's Mother—By Night and Day

There's no excuse for the modern matron looking anything but enchanting at her son's or daughter's wedding this fall, as witness Mrs. George F. Bayliss, Washington mother of a bride-to-be. Left, she wears plum crepe, richly embroidered for the formal wedding; right, she chooses a black wool and galyack suit with chartreuse blouse. Mrs. Bayliss' accessories are of soft black antelope and her sophisticated little felt has a trimming of coque repeating the chartreuse accent. Her trim, size 16 figure will help Mrs. Bayliss appear as smart as many of the younger guests at the wedding.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Sudden Interest in Another Man Prompts Her to Return Fiance's Ring; He Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been engaged for several months to a girl whom I love very dearly. She has all the qualities a man could want in a wife, and I feel that I could never be happy without her. Recently, however, she returned my ring, saying that she has met another man for whom she cares, and that she thinks it wouldn't be fair to marry me, feeling the way she does about him. (She admits she isn't sure he feels the same way about her.)

We had agreed to be honest about it, if either of us should ever care for someone else. She is not the type to hurt anyone and would sacrifice her happiness for mine, if she thought I wanted her to. I have met the other man and I don't feel he is the type who could appreciate her sterling character as I do. Therefore, I am reluctant to see her give up a chance at what might mean greater happiness for both of us in future. What shall I do? ANXIOUS.

DEAR ANXIOUS: The thing to do is to acknowledge the girl's right to be true to her feelings. By sincerely affirming that right—to yourself and to her—you will have met the requirements of the situation as effectively as they can be met. You will have demonstrated the generous, dependable quality of your love for her; and you will have set her so free that in very loneliness of spirit she may promptly turn back to you.

There is the favorable possibility, too, that she is not so interested in the other man as she thinks, and that all she needs is a little time in which to pursue an unhampered acquaintanceship with him, in order to find that her "feeling" was a flash in the pan. Her sudden indecision, halfway in the engagement, suggests that she is somewhat afraid of getting married; probably because she thinks she hasn't had sufficient romantic experience to be able to make a wise, permanent choice.

In any event, if there is justification for your conviction that you could make her happier than the other man could you can well afford to set her free to make that discovery for herself. It is neither expedient nor necessary for you to try to influence her feelings by overt tactics. M. H.

Relative's Help Needed In the Circumstances

DEAR MRS. W. F. A.: Etiquette authorities hold it "not quite appropriate" for shower invitations to be issued by the mother or sister of the honored guest. However, this doesn't mean that you may not include your friend's mother as chief conspirator in your surprise party plans. In the circumstances, plainly you need her help. Since it is appropriate for any friend (or mother of a friend) to issue the invitations, you might assume that responsibility in this instance, after making sure the girl's mother is happy to play the game with you.

The party might be given as a buffet luncheon, with each guest bringing a donation of food, in addition to the "baby" gift. Or it could be an afternoon tea or an evening party—just as you wish. It would be best to get the mother's suggestion on what hour would be most convenient for the honor guest. A mid-afternoon party might be preferable, as it probably would prove less taxing on her strength, if she carries full household responsibilities. M. H.

She Plans Shower For Expectant Mother

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A friend of mine, who has been married about two years, is expecting a baby soon. Just recently she moved a goodly distance away, and consequently few of her friends know how to find her new home.

Since hearing of her expected good fortune, several of her old friends in this locality have expressed a desire to surprise her with a baby shower. We plan to go to her home, in her absence, and arrange the gifts and a little party in her honor on her return.

We would like for her mother to take the lead in handling the "surprise" planning. We would like for her to set the date, contrive an excuse for calling her daughter away, etc., and give us entree to her home so we can set the stage.

But here are our questions: Is it correct for her mother to do this? In other words, it is permissible for the relative of an expectant mother to take part in planning a shower party for her? When is the most appropriate hour for such a party? Are there any special rules to be followed?

What to Wear

Bridegroom Should Buy The Flowers

3 Experts Offer Advice to Men About to Mary

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

This is the second in a series of articles on good form in dress.

DO YOU HAVE the jitters because one day this month you'll walk down the aisle to claim a beaming bride?

Or, are you nobly stoic, being the bride's or bridegroom's mother, having been through all this before, but still uncertain what to wear to her or his wedding?

Are you shaky about which are this fall's smartest flowers?

If so, relax, and profit by the advice given in this week's fashion-etiquette article by a trio of local authorities.

Since last week's column dealt with the bride's dress problems, this time the bridegroom will go under the microscope—and at the expert hands of Lewis Saltz. This men's fashion authority says that style lifts a supercilious eye at any "individualistic" attitude in clothes by the bridegroom.

What to Wear

Following the well-turned out bridegroom around the clock, if he awakens at the crack of dawn for 8 a. m. nuptials, he'll put on an oxford morning coat, striped worsted or cheviot trousers and a doublebreasted waistcoat. For a more formal daytime ceremony he'll wear a short morning coat, doublebreasted waistcoat and striped or checked trousers. At a very informal day wedding, a black or oxford grey coat may be substituted for the morning coat ad a black homburg or derby for the traditional silk topper. Any of these outfits are correct, but if he's charming though penniless, it's not criminal for him to wear his darkest worsted business suit with his best white linen shirt, stiff collar and grey-black tie.

Formal evening weddings always require tail coats with a single breasted waistcoat, starched bosom shirt, bold wing collar and white pique butterfly tie. Either the black silk hat or the opera hat is correct. The dinner jacket may be worn after six by the groom but not unless his exchequer absolutely balks at tails.

Bridegroom's Posy

The groom not only buys the bride's bouquet, but his and her mother's, and naturally his own boutonniere. If he is well to do and marrying a Cinderella, he makes everybody happy by buying the bride's attendants their flowers, too, even though this is normally the bride's responsibility. The boutonniere he wears usually repeats a flower from the bride's bouquet.

Which brings us to the preferred flowers for the September bride. Floral Expert Mrs. Amelia Gude Thomas' recommendations include gardenias or white roses and lilies of the valley for the traditional bride. For the wedding of an "independent" bride, she suggests a "streamlined" spray of chrysanthemums stripped of foliage and the stems wrapped in "parafilm" which seals in the freshness. For the modest informal corsage, tawny dahlias, yellow roses or button 'mums are cheerful—and cheap. However, delicate big white orchids are a long shot in favoritism for both the formal and the run-away Washington bride. "Gives them something to remember themselves by," says Mrs. Thomas.

Clothes for Bride's Mother

The bridesmaid may have a muff or topknot of fresh violets or carnations, but the most distinguished arrangement of all goes to the bride's mother. If she's large or plump, the smaller and flatter the flower, the less conspicuous and more flattering to her figure. Mrs. Thomas indorses the "phaelenopsis," but don't get alarmed—it's not a poison-breathing plant from the Amazon but a dainty small orchid resembling a pansy in size and facial expression. This pale lavender and white orchid is perfect for full-busted women when artfully twined close to the V neckline of their wedding day gown.

The same goes for her gown, which should be quietly handsome and discreet, according to Mrs. George F. Bayliss, herself the mother of a young bride-to-be. Mrs. Bayliss' association with local fashions prompts her to suggest soignee crepes and velvets in place of the inevitable trailing lace so many mothers affect for wedding days. Rich plum, grape, wine, pink, green, grey and Benedictine tan have replaced the sickening orchid tones, once considered indispensable to "the gown the bride's mother wore."

A Woman's Washington

By Jean Brownell

ONE THING leads to another in the life of a Bureau of Home Economics textile chemist. Ruth Elmquist Rogers, who with two male associates in the Department of Agriculture has discovered a method of sterilizing wool fabrics, explains that the newly patented process started as a sideline of another investigation. The sideline, it developed, kept her busy on and on for two years and has resulted in a potential boon to hospitals and dry cleaners.

Ruth Rogers

"We were experimenting with the effect of microorganisms on wool fabrics," she says. "First we had to sterilize the fabrics to destroy all other organisms. Existing methods, such as boiling and heating under pressure, proved unsatisfactory. So we experimented with ultra-violet light, iodine, alcohol and various salts and chemicals. Finally we found that by placing the fabric in a standard dry-cleaning solvent and heating it, we could sterilize it without damage to the fibers."

Should the process be taken up commercially, Mrs. Rogers feels it has many possible uses—in homes where clothes have been exposed to contagious diseases, in hospitals to sterilize woolen blankets without shrinkage and in Army field hospitals to reduce chances of infection among wounded soldiers.

Diana Rowland is telling her friends at Rehoboth Beach about a sweater she started to knit for Bundles for Britain. She didn't have time to complete it, so she turned it in to the organization unfinished. The volunteer worker who was assigned the job of binding it off turned out to be the daughter of an Italian Embassy official.

The child guidance books have yet to provide the solution of this problem. A modern young mother decided it was time to tell her 5-year-old son the facts of life. A skeptical child, he had long ago debunked Santa Claus, so she felt sure the stork myth would not satisfy him. He sat quietly while she told him the truth about Mother Nature. Then he gave her a stern look and said, "I don't believe it."

A Washingtonian home from the World's Fair tells of visiting the Westinghouse building to see Electro, the robot. When she arrived, the young lady in charge was saying persuasively to the mechanical man, "Come here!" but Electro just grinned blankly. A little flustered, the girl repeated her command, with the same result. This went on for some time; the spectators were getting restless when suddenly Electro made a strange noise and keeled over backward with a mighty crash. As he was encircled by workmen armed with the robot equivalent of stimulants and stethoscopes, he finally came through with one of his lines. "I'd rather have a cigarette," he said emphatically.

Career Hostess Gives Some Model Recipes

Clara Gebhard Snyder Chicago Nutrition Expert, Now Visiting in Washington In Interest of Wheat Flour Institute

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

WOULD YOU be the charming, easy-minded career hostess one reads about in books? Well, my story today is no story-book tale but about a woman in the home economics field.

Clara Gebhard Snyder, director, foods and nutrition department, Wheat Flour Institute, Chicago, Ill., is a woman who has been able to combine home-making and a career. I have known her for a long time. I have sat in her office in Chicago, watching her give interviews, pass on material and photographs, direct laboratory activities and make many a decision concerning wheat flour. Then, with business hours over, I have gone to her apartment where in a few hours she would play the role of hostess to dinner guests.

Martha Ellyn

Mrs. Snyder is a visitor in Washington now in the interest of flour. In fact, she is here concerning the definition of flour. Perhaps few persons realize that the millers over the country are trying to work out a definition for flour with Uncle Sam. So flour to this home economist means more than something you knead to make the dough.

When I interviewed Clara Snyder at the Washington Hotel, asking her what is new in the flour world, she said that one new thing is fortified flour. This flour is the miller's way of contributing to better national health by the addition of vitamin B1, other vitamins and minerals to flour.

Mrs. Snyder does crowd more than business activities into her life. I asked her if she had any scheme by which she combines business and home activities so effectively. She said, "Yes, I try to keep everything as simple as possible." This is a characteristic I have always noted about her, for she wears simple but striking clothes, talks in a simple direct manner, and sends out simple recipes for wheat flour products.

Mrs. Snyder says that she finds a 1 o'clock Sunday breakfast one of the best ways of entertaining guests. She has suggested a menu for such a breakfast.

Breakfast Menu

Peaches and White Grapes
in Sherry
Broiled Kidneys and Tomatoes
Cream Scones Raspberry Jam
Coffee

This food authority says that breakfast scones are a food that her guests especially like. Her recipe follows:

Breakfast Scones

Sift 1¾ cups soft wheat flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Put into these ingredients 3 tablespoons butter. Beat in a separate bowl, 2 eggs. Reserve 2 tablespoons of egg. To the remainder, add 1-3 cup cream. Make a well in the ingredients and pour the liquid in it. Combine the ingredients with a few swift strokes. Handle the dough as little as possible. Place it on a lightly floured board. Pat it until ¾-inch thick. Cut with a knife into diamond shapes, brush with the reserved egg, and sprinkle with sugar. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for about 15 minutes.

Mrs. Snyder also gave me cookie recipes that were developed in her test kitchen. Mothers who pack school lunches, or want cookies to serve with milk to satisfy after-school hunger, will especially appreciate the following cookie recipes.

Refrigerator Ginger Snaps are crisp and especially good when made bite size. After the dough is molded into a roll, it may be kept in the refrigerator until time for slicing and baking. Like all cookies baked on cookie sheets the snaps should be moved to a wire rack to cool just as soon as they come from the oven.

Refrigerator Ginger Snaps

Sift together, 2 cups sifted soft wheat flour, ¼ cup sugar, 1½ teaspoons soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon and 1 tablespoon ginger. Add ½ cup dry bread crumbs, ½ cup molasses and ½ cup melted shortening. Mix together thoroughly. Shape in a roll, wrap in waxed paper and chill until firm. Slice thin. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in moderate over, 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Yield, about 64 1-inch cookies.

Once you have tasted the Dream Bars made from Mrs. Snyder's recipe, you will enthusiastically agree that these cookies are well named. The recipe follows:

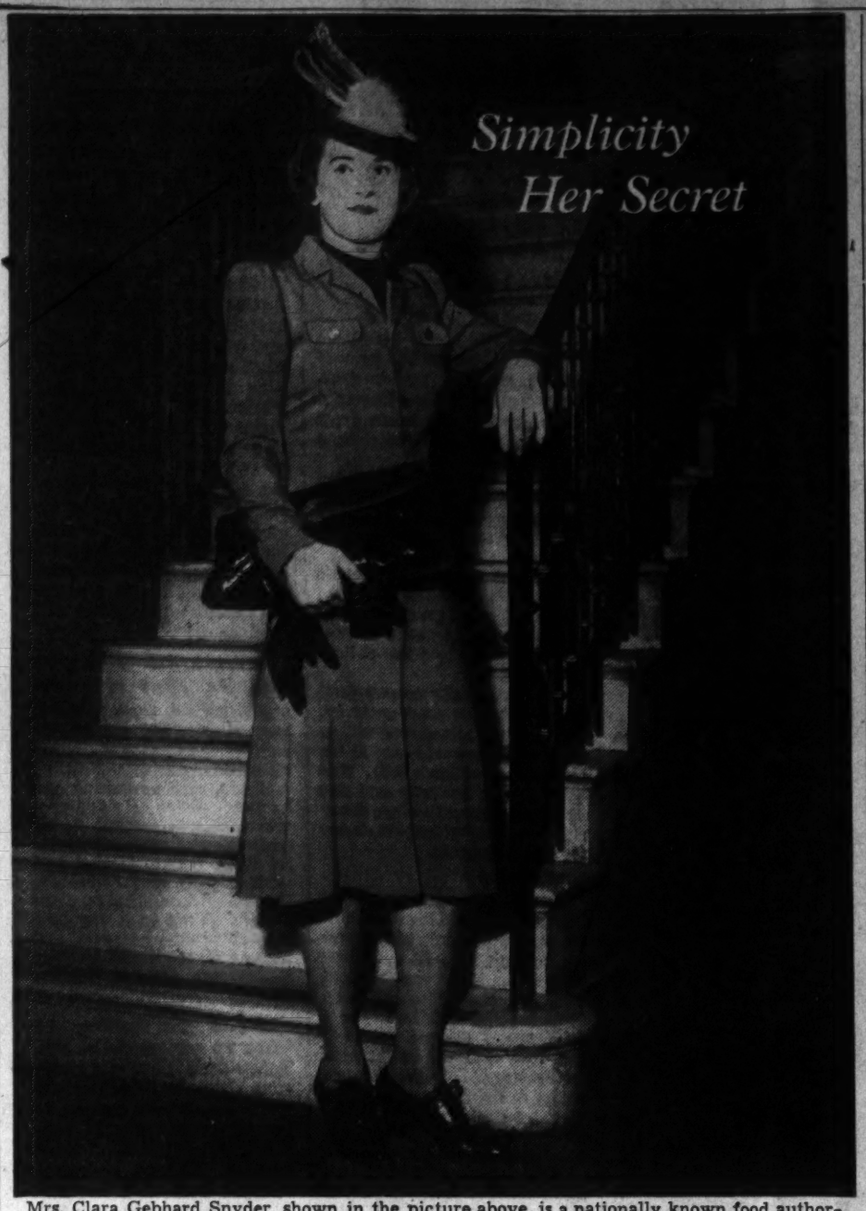
Dream Bars

Cut or rub ¼ cup butter into 1 cup sifted soft wheat flour and ¼ cup brown sugar until mixture is crumbly like pie dough. Pat into a shallow pan, 8x8x2 inches and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Spread the following batter over baked mixture:

Beat 2 eggs and add 1 cup brown sugar gradually. Sift ¼ cup soft wheat flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder together and add to egg mixture. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 1½ cups cocoanut and 1 cup chopped nut meats and mix thoroughly. Spread over baked mixture in pan and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 20 minutes, or until crisp and lightly browned. Yield, 18 2-inch squares.

Leftover Bread

Leftover rolls and biscuits sometimes go abegging, but when fixed up like this they become first-raters. Split the rolls, toast them lightly on both sides, and then spread them with a mixture of butter, grated cheese, a dash of onion, chili sauce and chopped parsley. Reheat and serve with soups or salads. To serve the rolls with the main part of a meal, just spread them with butter mixed with a little cheese.



Mrs. Clara Gebhard Snyder, shown in the picture above, is a nationally known food authority. Her creed for achievement is to do simple things and do them perfectly, rather than to attempt the unusual and not succeed

Soup Forms Base for New Dishes

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

THE ZONTA CLUB, on Wednesday, will have a memorial service at its regular luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A. honoring the late Mrs. Edith Charlton Salisbury, who was founder and first president of the local club.

The new international president, Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, a member of the Washington club, will be present and Mrs. Nan Street, the newly elected local president, will preside. The club will contribute a fund for Canadian war relief as a memorial to Mrs. Salisbury, who was a native of Canada. The money will be taken by Mrs. McElroy to Miss Jessie Ekin, of St. Catherines, Canada, who is first vice president of Zonta International, to use at her discretion.

Mrs. McElroy will leave immediately following next Wednesday's meeting on a circut of the Canadian clubs of which there are six in the international organization.

GIRL SCOUT DISPLAY—Books, baskets, metal bowls and trays, pottery pitchers, candlesticks and other arts and crafts articles made by the Girl Scouts of Baltimore, the District and Seattle, Wash., have been placed on special display at the Chalet, Girl Scout headquarters at the New York World's Fair. The exhibit, which will continue until the last week in September, is one of a series scheduled fortnightly, at which Girl Scout arts and crafts are shown to the public. The present exhibit succeeds one in which the work of Puerto Rican and Hawaiian Girl Scouts was represented.

The series of exhibits has been a feature of the 1940 program at the Chalet, and will continue until the closing of the fair in October.

The teas will be held at the homes of different members at the rate of two a month to which a limited number will be invited each time. On Sunday afternoon the first tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary Morse, of 1412 Morris road southeast. Two following those will be held at the homes of Miss Ella Reznik and Mrs. Edythe Shapiro.

Mrs. Edythe Shapiro is chairman of the committee and is being assisted by Esther Koplow, Ella Reznik, Dorothy Berman, Frieda Aronson, Saye Moss and Mrs. Mary Morse.

'Social Medicine' Gives Dr. Kildare Useful Idea

'Dr. Kildare Goes Home,' Capitol, Varies Form Of Hospital Subjects That Have Preceded It In Earlier Releases in Popular Series

"DR. KILDARE GOES HOME," the fifth release in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's popular series of "Dr. Kildare" pictures, was presented for the first time on a local screen yesterday to inaugurate the Capitol's new policy—temporary or permanent, noboby knows—of opening its new bills a day earlier than heretofore. Not quite "in the groove," it, nevertheless, is typical of its predecessors in the line.

BELL

In this subject, the youthful Dr. James Kildare has just graduated into the position of a full-fledged staff physician in the hospital where he has served so long and honorably as a rising young medico under the caustic and kindly auspices of the aging Dr. Leonard Gillespie, the character impersonated with such consistent effectiveness by Lionel Barrymore. Dr. Kildare, of course, is Lew Ayres. Scarcely has he received his new post when news of his father's failing health as a small-town doctor reaches him. So "Dr. Kildare Goes Home." It is a slightly complicated condition that he finds there. The logical solution seems to be to enlist a group of struggling medical graduates, who seem to have no chance of becoming independent practioners, in an adventure in "social medicine." How this is brought about is tangled with the usual considerations of small-town prejudice, the stubbornness of the town council and similar impediments.

But the matter is finally negotiated under circumstances that are reflective of an occasional sprightly sense of humor and, at other times, of a pseudo-scientific verbosity that is just a little boring. At least, "Dr. Kildare Goes Home" is less clinical than most of its precursors have been. It manages to get out of the hospital for the greater part of the time.

The cast is about as it always has been. Lionel Barrymore continues an acidulous, kindly and amusing Dr. Gillespie, with a profound understanding of the human race and especially that aspiring portion of it that comes under his immediate wing. Lew Ayres, in the title role, plays with his accustomed naturalness and sincerity and Laraine Day carries on as Nurse Mary Lamont, desperately and, at times, seemingly hopelessly in love with the sprouting scientist in whom she has such faith. Samuel S. Hinds and Emma Dunn are cast in the roles of the senior Kildares and execute their chores with the consummate skill of veteran players who have had long experience on both stage and screen. Gene Lockhart is another who falls into this category. Alma Kruger, as the superintendent of nurses, without whom no "Kildare" picture would seem complete, and Nat Pendleton contribute generously to the flow of comedy that intermittently graces the film.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week seems to be dedicated to commotion rather than the subtler forms of entertainment surest to appeal to the mass audience. Every act on the program whoops things up almost to the point of pandemonium.

Ciro Rimac and His Orchestra present their familiar "Pan-American Revue" as the topline feature. Their instrumentation runs largely to tom-toms and percussion instruments—with occasional milder moments—and their dancers run principally to the exotic and exhausting forms of physical frenzy supposed to characterize the "South American way." In Aliza Camargo, there is revealed a singer of Brazilian songs, who might be described as an embryonic Carmen Miranda. Charley Boy, Estrellita Pena, Marquita Rivera and Felipip are the other dynamic specialists.

Little Fred and His Football Dogs open the stage goings-on with a period of bunting toy balloons around with canine snouts, and Harry Rose, "The Broadway Jester," offers an interval of stentorian song and chatter that holds the noise average of the bill extravagantly high. The Dorn Bros. and Mary, singers, do no permit it to sag.

Mounties Have Their Romance

ROBERT PRESTON AND PAULETTE GODDARD, the young romanticists, who fall in love in Cecil B. DeMille's latest melodrama for Paramount, "The North West Mounted." Without having seen the picture, one is constrained to belief that their course of true love was a bit turbulent. When not fighting somebody else, they are reputedly battling among themselves. It sometimes happens like that

Metropolitan

Erich Wolfgang Korngold is certainly not the reason for "The Sea Hawk's" boxoffice success, but his music provides brilliant accompaniment to the action-filled Errol Flynn epic. After two weeks at the Earle, Warner's Elizabethan fiesta reopens this morning at the Metropolitan.

In fact, so striking is much of the music the Austrian has written for this American adaptation of English history that you'll find yourself following it with more interest than the tradition-plotted film. Strikingly scored, blaring the panoply of regal splendor, this score exemplifies the increasing attention Hollywood is paying to its musical scores. No longer are we foisted with the notion that a good "movie" score is neither seen nor heard; instead it illustrates, presages or intensifies the action.

No stranger is Korngold to the Warner studios. He arranged the music for "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Prince and the Pauper," "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex." While it is unfortunate that his recent assignments have kept him at work in the same forte, "The Sea Hawk" is his most stunning achievement.

Others in this slam-bang tale of Elizabeth's sea dogs are Flora Robson, Brenda Marshall, Donald Crisp, William Lundigan and Henry Daniell.

R. L. C.

Palace

As was wagered in the quarters of the cognoscenti, the literati and the intelligentsia, "Boom Town" is continuing for a third week at the Palace.

Cut as it is to the famed capabilities of mighty M-G-M's most powerful stars, "Boom Town" packs a wallop worthy of Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr and Frank Morgan.

Yes, they're all in the same picture and even though it seems like four or five films rolled into one, it's really only "Boom Town," a story of oil fields and then men they make rich, the men they make greedy, the women whose hearts they break and the women whose fortunes they make. Just like that, a pack of things rolled into one. Like life, only more action.

So if it's action you want, fights and heartbreaks in the grand 1940 American manner, you'll find "Boom Town" a bonanza of everything that's ever happened before. Jack Conway directed, as only the director of "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Hell Below" could direct an eventful, exciting narrative.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (INS).—I've never in my life heard such an Alphonse-Gaston act as Columbia and RKO are putting on over Cary Grant. If Cary were not the hottest thing in town it would seem like a backhanded compliment. RKO insists that Cary is reporting for work at Columbia early next week to start with Rosalind Russell in "This Thing Called Love" while Columbia says he is due at RKO for "Penny Arcade," with Irene Dunn. What's it all about?

PARSONS

Jimmy Cagney's next is going to be a red-white-and-blue patriotic opus—and that's a clever box-office move on the part of Warners if I ever heard one. A special story has been written for him by Owen Crump titled "The Tanks Are Coming," a yarn about war preparation which will be filmed at Fort Knox, Ky., with the aid of the Government. Warners, in line with all the companies, are making pictures Americans will want to see—for if they cannot please Uncle Sam's customers now they are out of luck, with their foreign market lost.

I am delighted that Ronald Reagan, who accompanied me last year on my personal appearance tour, is going ahead at Warners by leaps and bounds. I knew it would happen, for Ronny has such a following and was so well liked by all the young girls who flocked to the theater. He has ability, too, and is not only an actor, an excellent master of ceremonies, but a writer as well. He has just sold Warners an original story, "Cavalry Rides Again," in which he himself will star. Ronnie is a second lieutenant in the Cavalry reserve, so he knew his subject well.

I have never seen 30 people sit so still as they did at Mary Pickford's house when "Foreign Correspondent" was shown. Mary and I had seen it before and we sat through it a second time just as interested and better able to admire William Cameron Menzie's marvelous effects, the first time we were too carried away with the story. The party honored Lady Mendl and it was so nice. I had such a talk with Buddy Rogers, so handsome now that his hair is turning gray at the Temples. He told me that Lynn Shore, who is directing him in "Golden Hoofs," at Twentieth Century-Fox, gave him his first screen test 14 years ago when he was at the Paramount School in New York.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Vivien Leigh's 7-year-old daughter, Suzanne, is safe in Canada with Vivien's mother, who has also just arrived from war ridden England: Orson Wells and Dolores Del Rio certainly act as if they mean it and from all I hear and see they do; George Cukor is entertaining Sunday night for Rene Clair, who has so many interesting stories to tell of his hurried departure from France. The Germans destroyed all his papers and books which were valuable to him in his work.

Athol Hawks, who has been so ill, dining with her sister, Norma Shearer, at one of the valley cafes; Rosemary Lane and Buddy Westmore actually cooing at Victor Hugo's; Eliza Wilson sails tomorrow for Honolulu on the Lurline. Lucky girl!

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 12.

If Stirling Hayden, who's playing the second lead in "Virginia," isn't a star within a year, then I've never seen one. He's a blond, "twinkly" blue-eyed giant of 6 feet 4. Born in Montclair, N. J., his father died when he was nine, so he and his mother moved to Gloucester, Mass., and that's where he got his love for the sea. His first seagoing job was sailing from New London to Balboa. His wage was 25 cents a month. He rode a freight train home. He was captain of a yacht which went on a fishing tour off the Newfoundland banks, became mate of the sailing ship Yankee, which sailed around the world and put in at 125 ports. Navigated another large vessel.

HOPPER

Then he and a pal bought the Kaiser's yacht, which they made over into a passenger ship and called it the Aldebarn, which ran into a frightful storm, and they had to put in at Charleston, S. C., for repairs. In fact, he's done all of the things Errol Flynn's reported to have done, and is male to the heels.

With all the success Laraine Day's had lately, she told me her greatest thrill, since returning from the East, is the news that Adrian will design her clothes for her next picture.

One of the busiest actors in town is Nat Pendleton. He's been making broadcasts in Spanish and Portuguese for his South American fans, and there are people here unkind enough to say, "Gee whiz—and we weren't sure he could speak English!"

Producer Bill LeBaron, in the loudest checkered coat he's yet worn, was approached by an elderly woman at Del Mar race track, who asked him for a couple of winners. He obliged—although that isn't the way it turns out when I ask him for one. When the woman cashed her bets, she came back and handed him $5, and said, "I never knew a tout could be so charming.

That volatile and vivacious Odette Myrtil, who has become one of our better dressmakers, plies her trade right into a good acting job. She plays a French dressmaker with Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 12.

CRITICISM: Alexander Ince, who will publish the new magazine, Stage, was born in Budapest and spent most of his life there. When, as a boy, he discovered the existence of the theater, Ince was too poor to afford the price of admission. He, therefore, would wait until the first-act intermission, mingle with the crowd of theatergoers in the lobby, and then push his way inside. For many years Ince pursued this nonexpensive practice of getting into theaters just as the second-act curtain was rising . . . Tuesday Ference Molnar invited Ince to tea and showed him the manuscript of his new play. The publisher read it carefully, and then offered his criticism: "I like the last two acts very much," he stated, "but I think you'll have to rewrite the first act. That first act isn't very good" . . . "I won't pay any attention to you," said Molnar. "You know nothing about such things—because you've never seen a first act."

LYONS

MARRIAGE: Bennett Cerf, who will be married next week, received a phone call from Carl Vechten, asking where the wedding ceremony will be held . . . "Frankly," said Cerf, "we haven't decided as yet" . . . "I guess any place is all right, for a wedding," Van Vechten advised, "but don't get married at the Algonquin" . . . "Didn't you like the Algonquin?" asked Cerf . . . "If you get married there," Van Vechten warned, "they're liable to throw Elmer Rice at you."

DANCE: Abe Lyman was reminiscing with some other band leaders about the larger places in which their orchestras had played, and the number of customers they had attracted there . . . "The largest place I ever played in was a big armory—where I drew the lowest gross of my career," Lyman confessed . . . "Just how large was it?" Abe was asked . . . "This'll give you an idea," he replied. "The place was so big and empty that five minutes after our band packed up and went home some couples were still dancing—to our echo."

PRAYER: Kay Francis told us this story—of Richard Nichols, the 6-year-old boy who is appearing in her new film, "Little Men." Nichols' last movie appearance was in "All This, and Heaven, Too," and the youngster now is extremely movie-conscious. Kay heard him say his prayers, before going to bed: "God bless Mommy and Daddy and all our family and the Lone Ranger—Cut."

TEST: A British lecturer toured this country recently, and then went to Washington to confer with some of the legislators. The lecturer then met Noel Coward and reported his experiences. "My knowledge of America now is first-hand," he said. "I've spoken to them all, and know exactly how Americans think and feel" . . . "When you left the Capitol, after seeing Garner, how did you make your farewell?" asked Coward . . . "I said, 'Good-by, Mr. Garner,' and he said good-by, too, and addressed me respectfully as 'Mister'" . . . "Then your tour was wasted," Coward told him. "If, after the first hour, you couldn't call him Jack, and he couldn't call you Bill—then you don't really know Americans."

LUXURY: John Steinbeck is devoting all his time now to lessons in aviation and taking as many sun-baths as possible. This, he believes, is the only practical way of preparing for the immediate future—flying, because the fate of nations now depends upon aviators . . . and sunbaths, because in this day of air-raid shelters and blackouts, a deep suntan is the last remaining luxury of a human being.

Keystone Kops Now Directors Of Top Rank

Sutherland and Cline Are Still Influenced By Early Training

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Sept. 12.—We dropped out to Universal today to see a couple of Keystone cops—20 years after—but still in the laugh business and doing fine.

One is Eddie Sutherland, the other Eddie Cline. In the old days, they were targets for custard pies, cargoes for exploding flivvers, and (because they never had doubles) constant candidates for hospitalization. Now they're behind the cameras, as topnotch directors and in danger only from outrated leading ladies.

What happens to the ladies when Keystone cops get in control sometimes is something to see.

Sutherland currently is doing "Caribbean Holiday," with Allan Jones, Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Leo Carillo, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. Cline is directing the one and only W. C. Fields in "The Bank Dick."

After he graduated from the Keystone cops the handsome Sutherland became leading man for Bebe Daniels at $400 per week.

Willing to Be Quoted

"I was the lousiest leading man there ever was," he said, "and you can quote me on that. One morning I said to myself in the bathtub that I was a ham actor and getting hammier and it was time I got out of the business.

"I talked to Charlie Chaplin just like I talked to myself and he was sympathetic. Anyhow, he offered me a job as assistant director at $50 a week. I grabbed it."

For three years he worked for Chaplin and then got the chance to direct a picture himself. He's been at it ever since and with few regrets. He's done numerous serious pictures, some semiserious ones, like "Diamond Jim Brady," and dozens of comedies. He shines best with the latter; maybe it's his inheritance from the Keystone cops.

His last picture was "The Boys From Syracuse," and a mighty funny movie it was. The New York critics didn't much like it; they said it wasn't nearly so hilarious as the stage play. Other critics claim it was just as funny, but not so dirty.

Britishers Pose a Puzzle

"The Boys From Syracuse," in any event, was playing in a London movie theater last week when a Nazi plane dropped a bomb on it. Sutherland received word that the audience elected to dust the plaster off its lap and remain for the rest of the picture. He isn't sure whether this was in tribute to his artistry, or proof that Englishmen insist on getting what they pay for.

His coworker, Cline, in furthering the art of the cinema, has stuck pretty consistently to slapstick. He did all the Wheeler-Woolsey movies, then he directed a series of Bobbie Breen epics (which he'd just as soon forget), and returned to the business of making people laugh. This is harder than making them cry, but more satisfactory.

Opening shot of "The Bank Dick" found Actor Fields inevitably in a saloon. He ordered up a glass of whisky and a water chaser—which he used for a finger-bowl.

Blames It on Mother

There was some little difficulty with this scene. Fields fumbled the glass.

"Smatter?" demanded Cline. "Haven't you ever been in a saloon before?"

"Only once in my life," replied Fields, who admits he used to be a quart-a-day man. "My mother took me in while I was a boy."

Cline then turned to the problem of having Fields sit on the edge of a table and jump away from it with a fork sticking in his anatomy. How to make the fork stick was one problem; how to make Fields register pain was another. Director and star finally accomplished this to their mutual satisfaction and moved on to another artistic sequence.

Starlet Claims She 'Doubles' Pinocchio

Betty Brewer, Hollywood's brilliant young actress who makes her cinema debut in "Rangers of Fortune" opposite Fred MacMurray, this week saw herself on the screen for the first time and observed that she looks like Pinocchio.

Little Betty, who is just 13 years old, was discovered by Director Sam Wood while singing for pennies outside a Hollywood night club. A screen test proved to be the perfect type for the feminine lead opposite MacMurray in "Rangers of Fortune."

100 Attend Rally To Stir Interest In Youth Hostels

Visualizing a chain of youth hostels at 15-mile intervals from Washington to Western Maryland, along the Potomac River, about 100 persons gathered last night at a rally to stimulate interest in the movement.

The program at the Y. W. C. A. ended with plans for an organization meeting for a Washington District Committee of the American Youth Hostels at 2:30 p. m. Saturday at the same place. Officers will be elected and maps will be studied for location of possible sites.

Frederic B. Leonard, of Washington, volunteer field worker with the American Youth Hostels, pointed out the possibilities for vacation trips on bicycle along the chain of hostels. Charles Harris, of Northfield, Mass., an officer in the movement, said last night that after possible sites were picked in this territory, movies of "hostelers" would be shown in the communities to arouse local interest.

Temblors in Turkey

Istanbul (Friday), Sept. 13 (INS).—Two violent earthquakes were felt in the Istanbul district early today. No casualties so far have been reported.

WALK WARILY

Suggestions from an Overworked Guardian Angel

DARK DANGER. When walking in night traffic, carry a light or reflector, or wear something light in color. At least carry your handkerchief in hand. Otherwise the motorist can't see you more than 100 feet ahead. Since you can see him ten times sooner, get where it won't matter whether he sees you or not!

Gunshot Is Fatal To Md. Woman

Manchester, Md., Sept. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Vesta Graf, 45, died in Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, today a few hours after her husband, Oliver, reported finding her lying unconscious on the floor of her home near here, with a bullet wound in her head.

Sheriff Walter L. Shipley said Graf told him he found his wife, with a .22-caliber rifle lying nearby, when he came into the house about noon for lunch.

Shipley said Mrs. Graf left a note addressed to her son, Robert, 19, of Washington, in which she said "life is not worth living" because of her ill health.

Hold Tight to That Rabbit's Foot—It's Friday the 13th

It Will Be Worse Than Usual This Year, Too, if Numbers Mean Anything; Beware Of Ladders, Black Cats—And Men in White

This is Friday the 13th, 1940's first.

"Watch out tomorrow," our private numerologist, seated cross-legged on a plush covered ottoman as he balanced a crystal ball on his forehead, warned us yesterday, "for stepladders, black cats . . ."

"And glamorous blondes," we interrupted.

"Yes, and glam—Wait a minute! You're getting ahead," said the numerologist, extracting from his kimono a pair of dice that rolled nothing but sevens. "You're not taking this Friday the 13th matter seriously. Do you realize the date is especially significant this month?"

Swami River, which happens to be the numerologist's name, was invited to explain.

"Well," he began, as a tip-seeking numbers runner cooled his heels in the vestibule, "September is what month? Right, the ninth. What do the digits nine and the one and three in 13 add up to? Right, 13."

Our numerologist, impressed by his sagacity, drew deeply upon a scented cigarette and continued.

"September has nine letters, hasn't it?" he asked rhetorically. "Now add that nine to the number of letters it takes to write the number 13 in Roman style thus XIII—and what do you have? Correct, 13 again."

By now his chest was beginning to swell alarmingly.

"But you ain't heard nothing yet," he crowed. "Look, how many more days until the next Friday the thirteenth? Don't bother to count. It's 91 more days—or seven times 13."

Swami River was about to go on from there when two men dressed in white coats walked in and, taking our numerologist gently but firmly by each arm, eased him through the door.

"Goody," yelled Swami, "we'll have fish for dinner tonight, won't we boys?"

"You bet," one of the keepers answered. "Fried mackerel, with 13 letters, especially for you."

Bankhead Reported 'Much Improved'

Speaker William B. Bankhead was in "very favorable" condition last night at U. S. Naval Hospital, where he was taken yesterday after an attack of sciatica in Baltimore Tuesday night, it was reported at his home.

The 66-year-old legislator collapsed shortly before he was to have addressed a Democratic rally. He was rushed from Baltimore to the local hospital in a Navy ambulance.

Ringside Table

By Mary Harris.

HEAVENLY COSMOS ROOM OPENS. This will be a lucky night for night-spot goers, for all that it's Friday the 13th. The Carlton's new Cosmos Room opens tonight with elegant fanfare and a list of reservations so long that Alfred d'Mazzon, maitre d'hotel, is suffering acutely from writer's cramp.

Ben Young's band, which has diverted the millionaires of Grosse Point, Mich., all summer, will hold forth sweetly from the Cosmos bandstand with glowing interludes by Singer "Ginny" Braynard and the trio vocal harmony of the "Youngsters." The Young orchestra rose from the ranks of collegiate pace-making bands in the West, was "discovered" by Billy Rose for the Fort Worth Centennial, is now recognized as a foremost exponent of modern dance rhythm.

Sharing attention with the Young music will be the Cosmos Room decorations, said to be on the celestial side, with comets, constellations and beauteous goddesses romping amid the astounded planets. Yes, sirs and madames, you'll find the Cosmos really cosmic!

The Lounge Riviera will hold its "fall opening fiesta" on Tuesday, September 24. By this time the Riviera will have been enlarged to twice its present size (without interruption to evening good times). The enlargement comes under the head of both public service and necessity, since Riviera is now filled every night in the week. With extra swarms of patrons due this fall, there had to be expansion, or else . . . The Rainbow Room will celebrate its "fall opening" on Wednesday, September 25, with one of its traditional whoop-la parties, with loads of radio and stage celebrities as honor guests.

SHOREHAM GOES PAN-AMERICAN. The three beauteous daughters of the Minister of Panama, Senoritas Elena, Mildred and Edith Boyd, will star in the "Pan-American Week" that will climax the Shoreham Terrace season, beginning next Monday. They'll do a Mexican hat dance, a Spanish dance and sing to their own guitar accompaniment. It's expected that there'll be gay parties from all the 19 Latin-American Embassies and Legations during the week. Maracas and South American leis will be given to Terrace guests as souvenirs. The Latin-American motif will be carried out in the balance of the revue with much tango, conga and gaucho stepping.

MATT WINDSOR, now back at the Anchor Room for the season

MUSICIAN'S VACATION. Dancing in the Metronome Room to Grant Thompson's music, we spotted Musicians Russ Cullen and Marty Rubin. It seems they're getting in all the good times the law allows between now and September 26, when they'll join the Bert Bernath orchestra at the opening of the Pall Mall Room . . . Carr van Sickler, Madrillon's maestro, just took an afternoon off to call on us with the information that the Madrillon bandstand is to be transfigured, that the new dance floor is "resilient" and that something "terrifically exciting" is going to happen in the Peter Borras spot.

SUPERLATIVES TO: The voice of Troika's new tenor, Candido Botelho. And he gives encores at the Troika that he doesn't on the radio . . . Champion Acrobats Martin and Allen of the Lotus "Cocoanut Grove Revue" for being suntanned Apollos. (Honestly, they look like underwear ads) . . . Evalyn Tyner, of the Neptune Room, for her crystalline piano-ing and the unpredictable touches she gives to every number . . . The girls of the Maryland Gardens floor show for their hot rhythm stepping. They strut like little game chickens . . . "Mousey" Garner, of Mayfair, for singing "Monday at the Zoo" every day in the week . . . Rodd Raffell, of the Nightingale, for his sweet but spicy dance music arrangements.

Jack Rollins will head the Gay Nineties floor show tonight and tomorrow. Maestro Al Oddone will step out with fancy warbling, and there'll be a group of pretty tap and hula steppers, headed by Anne Crystal.

BOY BALLET DANCER. A rare one is Woody Harris, of the new Casino Royal revue. He's a boy toe dancer, does a staircase toe-tap number that's a marvel. We haven't seen his like for months. You'll also like the Dancing Debutantes in their rollicking cowboy number, and the sleekly spectacular waltzing of the Burnetts. Ray Nelson has joined Jack Schaeffer's band as singer-bassist, also doubling on piano and guitar. A busy boy, this Ray . . . The Casino Royal's "fall opening party" will take place September 25.

TELLING JANE'S AGE. Jane Marlow, the New Bavarian's violinist, entered show business as a dancing violinist when she was 13 years old and that was 13 years ago. Now you do your own figuring.

OSCAR'S RING. The gold signet ring worn by Oscar of the Hi-Hat was given him 18 years ago by his Austrian employer. The ex-boss arrived in Washington recently as a refugee planning to become an American citizen. He and Oscar met for the first time since the day the ring was given.

Arthur Todd of the King Cole Room is making mysterious trips to New York every week-end. Our guess, and it's a good one, is that he's going to blossom out as a band leader in practically no time.

YOU SHOULD KNOW that you don't have to be an Elk to attend the dances at the Elks' Club on Thursdays and Saturdays. Just walk right in and step to the Dave McWilliams music and maybe you'll get acquainted with a couple of Elks . . . That Jack Dalton of the Harrington Tavern enjoys singing request numbers, and it's impossible to "stump" him on a Western ballad . . . That the patrons of Dick's Grill are nutsy about his new recorded music, sit around and play it by the hour.

NEW SONG WRITERS. Eileen George, Anchor Room's saucy songstress, and Frank Meyers, Mayfair's pianist, have jointly composed a verra pretty ditty called "I'll Always Adore You." It should be dedicated to Eileen's admirers.

Jury Duty Ruled A Full-Time Job

Elliott Declares Government Clerks Needn't Work Part Time

By Edward Ryan

Government employes called for jury duty are free from their regular jobs from the time they answer their summons to the time they are discharged by the court, according to a new ruling by Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott.

Elliott, is was learned yesterday, has told Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody that the jury term for a Government worker would be determined "from the date stated in the summons on which he is required to report to the court until he is discharged by the court."

He ruled that jury leave would called for their entire period of have to be granted to employes hours per day or days per week duty, regardless of the number of the employe actually served on the jury during the period."

Government employes and those of the District, under an act signed last June and another approved in 1935, serve without pay for jury duty, but their Government salaries and leave privileges continue as if they were on their regular job.

Clears Up Question

Carmody, however, asked the ruling to clear up the questions of whether an employe should be required to fill in a regular work week, if his jury service took only part time.

Carmody asked whether an employe should report to his regular job on Saturdays if he were excused from jury duty then, or come in to his job if his jury work took less than seven or eight hours on any one day.

Elliott said that during jury duty, the employe was under the jurisdiction of the court, and, in effect, the number of hours he worked there is not "under control of the administrative office where he is employed."

About 80 Govesnment jobs are in sight for competitors in the Civil Service Commission's new personnel technician examinations, officials said yesterday. The examinations are for five salary grades, from $2,000 to $4,600 a year.

Census Director H. L. Austin yesterday reported that more than half of the 8,151 temporary census employes on the job at the end of August were residents of four States and the District.

His report, showing a breakdown of the employment figures by States, was given to Chairman Bulow, of the Senate Civil Service Committee, after a delegation of Census employes visited the Capitol Monday to urge support for an amendment to the Ramspeck Bill which would give them civil service status. The amendment is sponsored by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York.

The census employes who handle returns and help make up final census reports, are hired from Civil Service Commission registers, for jobs thaht normally last two to three years. They are classed as temporary status, and their work does not give them the classified status which would permit them to transfer easily to other civil-service jobs in the Government.

Police Quiz Mother of Boy Lost 48 Hours

Chicago Authorities Queried in Check On Legal Guardianship

Police last night were attempting to learn if Mrs. Anna K. Auel, 31, mother of 5-year-old Ray Auel, lost boy who spent 48 hours at the District Receiving Home unclaimed, is the child's legal custodian.

A telegram was sent to Chicago, her home, and until a reply is received, she will be held at the Women's Bureau, Capt. Rhoda Milliken said. Ray, in the meantime, remained in custody of the Board of Public Welfare at a foster home.

Located at a downtown hotel Wednesday night after a two-day search by police and welfare authorities, Mrs. Auel told Capt. Milliken she arrived in Washington Sunday and was attempting to effect a transfer from the Chicago WPA to the local organization.

Ray became lost Monday, she said, and she did not report the matter to police because of what she called the lack of cooperation from Chicago police when the child disappeared there last year. She was attempting to find him herself, she stated, and when she saw his picture in the newspapers, she went to police.

Policeman Edwin Grayson, who located the woman, said she told him she had put the boy on a train for Chicago Tuesday, the day after he was found downtown.

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 13, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Sept. 12.—According to our information—ABOUT OSCAR VITT:

The reason Vitt did not resign his intolerable position as manager of the Indians, after the Cleveland players publicly repudiated him in their March on Bradley is this: He couldn't afford it.

POVICH

Vitt's contract with Owner Bradley calls for a bonus based on Cleveland's home attendance for 1940. When, and if, the attendance passed the 400,000 mark, Vitt would begin to cash in handsomely. At the time of the revolt, Vitt stood to make thousands. Whatever may have been his urge to quit in the face of the player rebellion, he couldn't afford to walk out on such profits. He simply swallowed his pride and fattened his bank account.

He's through as a big league manager after this season. That was decided long ago, by Vice President Slapnicka of the Indians. His successor will be Luke Sewell. The Indians signed Sewell as a free agent last year at no cost. In June of this season, Slapnicka turned down a $7,500 offer for Sewell from the Browns, despite the fact that Sewell is no longer an active player. The reason Slapnicka wouldn't sell? He wanted Sewell around for the day when Vitt's job would become so intolerable he would quit.

Vitt won't be jobless next season. He'll be taken care of—by the Yankees. He'll manage one of the Yankee farms in the high miners. Joe McCarthy has assured Vitt of that.

ABOUT THE TIGERS—They despise the Indians and think the Yanks are the only club they have to beat. They'd welcome a showdown with the Indians in the last week, if it came to that. They're a little bit surprised to find themselves threatening to take it all, but now they like their chances.

Buck Newsom says they'll outgame any club they have to lick. He expects to be the highest-paid pitcher in baseball next season with the exception of Bob Feller if the Tigers win the 1940 pennant for Walter Bridges. He says the ideal manager for the Indians next year would be Rogers Hornsby. "I'd hate to be the ball player who went over Hornsby's head," grinned Buck.

The Tigers have been a lucky club. Its decadent infield of Higgins at third, Bartell at short and Gehringer at second has been hanging in there almost Providentially. The season's abnormal rains have slowed the infields all around the circuit and made their task easier. It is on the hard-baked playing surfaces that the Detroit infield is revealed for what it is—a spavined, slow-moving lot of ancients.

Hank Greenberg, Newsom and Schoolboy Rowe have been keeping the Tigers up there. The romantic item is Rowe's comeback. The old fireball is gone, but he has learned how to pitch a curve. In all the history of baseball, Old Bing Miller has been the only man who really liked to swing at curve-ball pitching.

ABOUT THE YANKEES—Joe McCarthy actually is none too happy about his ball club. It's so different from typical Yankee teams and smacks too much of the National League sort of team. McCarthy isn't kidding himself. He knows this year's Yankees don't have power. They've been winning games by pitching and what has been the best defense in the league.

The Yanks are burdened with too many of the weak-hitting gentry they used to be able to "carry" when they had their Dickeys and DiMaggios and Gehrigs functioning nicely. But today DiMaggio is carrying the entire load. Crosetti hasn't had a hit in his last 17 times at bat.

Yankee errors have cost them their last two defeats. Yankee errors, few as they are, are damaging this season because Yankee pitchers rarely have comfortable working margins. When Yankee power was the scourge of the league, Yankee errors were comparatively harmless.

Ernie Bonham, with his five straight victories, has been teaming with DiMaggio to keep the Yankees up there a whisper from the lead. For McCarthy, Bonham has been a case of bread cast upon the waters. Three years ago McCarthy kept with the Yankees a minor league pitcher named Frank Makosky. He liked Makosky, who got a full World Series share. 'Eventually then sent him to Kansas City. There, Makosky taught Bonham the fork-ball pitch that put the Yankees in the pennant race.

ABOUT THE WHIZZER WHITE—The Pittsburgh Steelers sold him to the Detroit Lions for a fancy price, but that wasn't the only reason they were willing to part with the dashing Whizzer. Art Rooney's Pittsburgh team badly needed a passer, and Whizzer is not a passer despite his reputation as one.

His two years of study at Oxford and Yale have forced White to wear glasses. Actually he does not see down field too well when he is back for a long pass. His failure to distinguish his own men resulted in too many interceptions. That's why he was sold.

Casey Wins 2 Games As Dodgers Beat Bucs

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 12.—A lot of pitchers have tried the "iron man" stunt of pitching both ends of a double-header, but Hugh Casey, of the Dodgers, did the trick today without so much work.

He pitched three-hit ball to shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 0, in the first game and then returned as a relief pitcher in the seventh inning of the nightcap and got credit for Brooklyn's 7-to-4 victory, his eleventh of the year.

Tigers Beat Yanks to Hold Lead; Indians Win

Boston Gets Only 3 Hits Off Harder

Cleveland Scores 7 Runs in Fourth To Ruin Bosox Chances in Race

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 12.—Veteran Mel Harder, flung a three-hit pitching masterpiece at the failing Boston Red Sox today for a top-heavy 8-to-1 triumph which kept the Cleveland Indians a half game behind league-leading Detroit.

The hit-hungry Indians found the Red Sox pitching to their liking, teeing off on Fritz Ostermueller and Emerson Dickman for a four-inning outburst which produced seven runs.

The scant crowd of 1,000 in Cleveland's 80,000-seat stadium saw Harder finish his second game of the season, good for his fifth victory over Joe Cronin's sluggers. It was the veteran right-hander's tenth victory against 12 defeats.

The Indians picked up a run in the second on Beau Bell's single and Dominic DiMaggio's muff of Ray Mack's liner to center, but reserved the fireworks for the fourth.

Lou Boudreau opened by drawing a walk from Ostermueller, tobacco-chewing southpaw who frequently has the Tribe's number. Bell grounded out, advancing Boudreau to second, and the stage was set for the Indians' biggest inning in weeks.

Cleveland followed with six straight hits, and for a time it appeared as if the umpires would have to get the side out. Ken Keltner singled Boudreau home and Mack singled Keltner to third. Frankie Pytlak, catching in place of the slightly injured Rollie Hemsley, also singled, Keltner scoring and Mack reaching third with a neat slide.

Harder Surprises Self

Harder surprised even himself by lining a double to center, Mack scoring, for the blow which sent Ostermueller to the showers and introduced Dickman.

Ben Chapman singled the first pitch, scoring Pytlak, and Roy Weatherly singled to plate Harder. Jeff Heath struck out, but with Boudreau up for the second time, Chapman and Weatherly worked a double steal, Chapman scoring and Weatherly landing at second. Boudreau singled and Weatherly tallied with the seventh run of the inning. Bell ended it by forcing Boudreau.

The Red Sox couldn't do anything with Harder until the ninth when Roger Cramer led off with a triple to right center, and scored on Ted Williams' fly to leftfield. The first Boston hit was Bobby Doerr's fifth-inning single, and the other was DiMaggio's single in the sixth when he got Harder in the hole and

Police Benefit Tomorrow to Go On Rain or Shine

The weather, meaning whether it rains or shines, won't interfere with the benefit field day to be offered by the police and firemen tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Griffith Stadium.

Lieut. John J. Agnew, athletic chairman, says thus far he hasn't been jinxed by the Weather Man in anything he's promoted, and that the show will go on regardless. Agnew has a 39-event program all set to go, and this morning at the Stadium he and his associates on the athletic committee will gather to lay out the field for the various events.

There will be 12 track events between the Police and Firemen, and a number of the bluecoats will be on hand to go through their final paces, mostly to get the feel of the Stadium "cinder."

R. J. Walters, of Police, who won both the 50 and 75-yard dashes for men past 45 in the 1936 event, yesterday accepted a challenge from J. T. Mooney, one of the firemen in the 75-yard dash. The bet consists of the loser wheeling the winner around the park in a cart three times before an expected 20,000 persons.

Rookie Anderson Beats Browns for Nats, 7-2

Jack Sanford Paces Attack With Triple, Double, Single as Griffs Slug Hurler Kennedy; Charlotte Recruit Limits Foes to Six Hits

Special Dispatch to The Post

St. Louis, Sept. 12.—A pair of rookies, Arnold Anderson and Jack Sanford, prodded the Washington Senators to a 7-2 victory here this afternoon in the opening game of a three-game series.

Anderson lanky right-hander from Charlotte, N. C., turned in a neat mound performance in his second start since joining the club a couple of weeks ago, holding the Browns to six scattered hits and save for the fourth inning when the Browns put over their two runs, he didn't permit a runner to get past first base.

Pacing the 13-hit attack against Vernon Kennedy, who dropped his sixteenth decision of the season, and Roxie Lawson, who hurled the last two frames was Sanford. He poled three hits, including a triple and a double to drive in three of the Senator runs.

Triple Drives in Two

It was his triple which drove in Cecil Travis and Jimmy Bloodworth in the second inning and he later scored on Jimmy Pofahl's long fly to give the Senators a lead which they never relinquished. It was his single which climaxed a two-run outburst in the third inning after Gerry Walker had tripled and Travis had singled. Travis taking second on a passed ball, romped home on the hit to make the count 5 to 0.

In the last of the fourth, Anderson issued the first of three walks which led to the Browns runs. Johnny Lucadello opened the frame with a pass and after Rip Radcliff had been retired, Walter Judnich doubled to right. Lucadello pulled up at third on the hit, but scored a moment later on a wild pitch, Judnich taking third. Judnich also scored as Clift grounded to Pofahl.

The Senators picked up their sixth run in the fifth inning on Walker's second extra base hit, a double to right center, and a single by Travis.

After Kennedy was removed for Pinch-Hitter Chet Laabs in the last of the seventh, the Nats nicked Roxie Lawson for a run in the eighth as Sanford produced his third hit, a double to left and Pofahl singled to center.

Dutch Leonard Becomes Father Of 8-Pound Son

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 12.—When the Chicago White Sox pounded Emil "Dutch" Leonard, pitcher for the Washington Senators for 16 hits and a 7 to 4 victory yesterday, it was probable Mr. Leonard was worrying about something else.

The pitcher's wife, Mrs. Rose Leonard gave birth today in St. John's Hospital to an 8 pound 11 ounce son. The Leonards' home is Auburn, Ill.

Belloise Wins Decision Over 'Sick' Garcia

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 12.—Young Steve Belloise, fighting like a nervous man swatting flies, won a shot at the middleweight title tonight by taking the ten-round decision over ancient and allegedly sick Ceferino Garcia at Madison Square Garden.

Belloise, by virtue of this somewhat hollow victory, will be tossed into the ring with Champion Ken Overlin for a title bout in November.

Steve—21-year-old brother of the former featherweight king, Mike Belloise—won the unaimous decision, but he was roundly booed by the 10,869 fans because of his persistent refusal to stand and slug it out with Senor Garcia of the Philippines.

Garcia, in the middle 30's and fighting for more than 12 years, dropped the middleweight title to Ken Overlin in May. And tonight before he donned his trunks, it seemed that he might drop in his tracks in the dressing room.

Garcia claimed that he was sick, that he had the shakes and was in no condition to fight. Promoter Mike Jacobs had the Boxing Commission physician, William H. Walker, examine him. Dr. Walker said

Ward Beaten By Billows In Amateur

Defending Champ Bows; McCullough, Wehrle, Chapman Also in Semifinal

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The Bud Ward for National Amateur Champion Club received an awful setback here today at Winged Foot. It lost its candidate. For the defending champion from the Great Northwest, touted as the greatest simon-pure since Lawson Little, took a bad quarter-final beating from Ray Billows, the man he routed in the finals last year.

Billows, the 25-year-old three-time State champion from Poughkeepsie, who has knocked at the door in the national finals twice, came from behind in the morning to win an extra hole match over Harry Haverstick, and then, like a man who takes a new lease on life, he really went to work on Ward in the afternoon.

He was joined in the round of four for tomorrow's 36-hole tests by a real dark horse from Philadelphia, W. B. (Duff) McCullough, who went Billows one better by ousting two former champions in the same day, Willie Turnesa, '39, and Johnny Fischer, 36. Remaining in the upper bracket is Wilford Wehrle, who now assumes the favorite's role, and Dick Chapman, the socialite-singer from this city.

Wehrle Wins, 6 and 5

Wehrle showed little mercy for his golfing pal, Tommy Sheehan, in the morning as he ended the match, 6 and 5, and in the afternoon, up against a fellow Chicagoan, George Dawson, he went only one hole farther, winning 5 and 4.

Chapman, medalist and a 1938 semifinalist, also required only 27 holes to dispose of a pair of former Georgetown University intercollegiate champions, Maurice McCarthy, Cincinnati, and Johnny Burke, Newport, R. I. The respective margins were 5 and 4, and 6 and 5.

The strictly Washington interest will be missing in the semifinals. Otto Greiner, of Baltimore, upset star of the first day's match play, was on the receiving end of a bad break on the fourth hole against Dawson in the morning and from that point to the fourteenth hole he never got going as Dawson gained the quarter-finals for the second straight year with a 6-and-4 victory.

Burke's Game Changes

Burke, a former District of Columbia amateur champion, was up all the way as he defeated Frankie Strafaci, New York, 1 up in the morning round. Johnny held a dormie three hole lead, lost 16 to a birdie, 17 to a par, and when it looked as though Strafaci would pull out from under for the third straight match, Burke threw a great trap shot almost in the cup on the eighteenth to insure the victory.

In the afternoon against Chapman, it was not the same Burke. He played 13 holes without a birdie, didn't win a hole and was no match for his conqueror's subpar exhibition.

Chapman is the scoring star of the tournament thus far. A total of six under for 27 holes today, Chapman now stands 12 under for 93 holes of competition over one of the toughest courses ever host to the tourney.

Werhle and McCullough were each one below perfect figures today, for 27 and 30 holes, respectively, while Billows lost one stroke to par as he walked 34 holes in his two matches.

Wehrle is the only stumbling block to the title coming back to the East. He hails from Niles, Ill., just outside Chicago, and is Billows' age,

Gordon's Bad Throw Costs N. Y. Victory

Champions Lose 6-3 Decision to Detroit to Slump Two Games Behind

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit Sept. 12.—From a double play that the Yankees didn't make stemmed four eighth-inning runs that lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 6-3 victory today in the American League's feverish pennant race.

Joe Gordon, reputedly the best second baseman in baseball, botched it for the Yankees with a wild throw. Into a complete pitching collapse went young Atley Donald, and the Tigers, reprieved by Gordon's error, fired a four-hit salvo that wiped out the Yankees 3-2 lead and sent 19,272 Briggs Stadium fans into mild hysterics.

For the Yankees it was a ghastly defeat that dropped them two full games behind the league-leading Tigers, a game and a half in the rear of the second place Indians.

Young Donald was out-pitching Schoolboy Rowe at the time of Gordon's error. He was holding a one run lead, one Tiger was out in the eighth, Gehringer was on first base, and Greenberg the hitter. A vicious drive off Greenberg's bat rocketed into the glove of third baseman Red Rolfe on a fast hop. For the Yankees it was double-play stuff on a platter.

Rolfe's throw to Gordon at second snuffed out Gehringer. Gordon wheeled for the relay to first that would have retired Greenberg by a dozen feet, and then—horrors! It was an indescribably dismal throw into the dirt that skipped through Dahlgren and into the Yankee dugout. Greenberg continued to second with the tying run.

Then Yankee pitching cracked, as the Tigers, siezing on their opening, fired away at Donald. Rudy York tied the score with a single to left and went to second when Keller threw to the plate. Bruce Campbell was intentionally passed. Frank Higgins drove in a run with a single to right. So did Billy Sullivan. Rowe greeted Relief Pitcher Marvin

Belloise Decisions Ceferino Garcia

Ceferino was all right except for stage fright. But when the word got around, many bets—at even money—were called off.

Belloise, lanky, dark-haired Italian, landed a lot of punches on the Filipino veteran, but few of them had any authority and most of them were short semi-rabbit blows at close quarters on the back of Ceferino's head.

Despite his alleged shakes, Garcia gamely tried to make a fight of it and pursued fast-stepping Steve about the ring, landing now and then, but generally missing. Ceferino managed to connect with a series of hard right and left hooks to the head in the sixth session, and after that Steve was doubly cautious.

Both Steve and Ceferino entered the ring heralded as the two hardest punchers in their division, but there wasn't a knockdown in the fight. Ceferino's inside "bolo" uppercut missed throughout, except for one glancing connection in the third. And Steve, as if taking lessons in bolo throwing, tried to toss a few back at safron-skinned Garcia.

The fans, who contributed a gate of $23,158, started booing in the seventh and continued during the remainder of the dull milling.

The United Press score sheet gave Garcia only the third and sixth; scored the ninth even and awarded the others to Belloise. The only bloodshed was started in the sixth, when Garcia had an old gash on his right brow reopened by a left hook.

It was the twenty-fifth victory for Belloise, who scaled 155¾ pounds. Garcia weighed 157¾.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 12.—We've got some bad news for G. Preston Marshall this morning, and we don't mean that Carl Storck, president of the National Football League, has generated enough gumption to appoint Bill Halloran as an official at all of Marshall's games. The bad news concerns the loss Marshall's Redskins will suffer this Sunday at the hands of the rejuvenated, rehabilitated Brooklyn Dodgers. The Redskins are in training for the Giants game in Washington the folowing Sunday. They regard our unsung Dodgers as a kind of warmup for the renewal of the pro game's No. 1 rivalry. That suits the good doctor, who doesn't mind spoiling Marshall's nor the Redskins' sabbath.

CONSIDINE

The good doctor is Dr. John Bain Sutherland, called Jock, who is making his coaching debut in the pro league at Griffith Stadium. He himself probably would rather beat the Pittsburgh Steelers the following week at Forbes Field. But he is gunning for Washington a lot more severly than the Redskins are gunning for him. We don't see how he can lose to a club whose mind is on something else, particularly when he has at his command the greatest team he ever piloted. Which is saying something. Dan Topping has shot the works this year. Everything about the Dodgers is new, from uniform to faces to coach to system.

He has them hopped up to a collegiate fervor that amazed even Dick Cassiano, who played on a couple of Sutherland's great teams at Pitt. If the doctor has anything to say about it, and he has, the Dodgers should outcharge and outblock those Redskins right up into Marshall's lap.

Sutherland has had a little trouble moulding Cafego to his style of play, which depends a lot of having the ball passed well ahead of the backfield receiver. McFadden has turned out to be even better than the Clemson publicity man said he was. The club was lucky, too, in getting Bud Svensen, the center, away from Green Bay. The center is a triply important guy on a Sutherland team. Art Jocher, who played so well in the Giants vs. All-Stars game, is also in the line. And is one of the reasons why the Dodgers have held their first two exhibition opponents to a few skimpy yards from scrimmage this season. Watty Young is a better end than he appeared to be last year, too, he is heavier and tougher and smarter this year ,and has Cafego and McFadden, as well as Parker, to pitch to him.

The pro game should be proud to have added Sutherland to its fold. However, we think the good doctor will be the first to celebrate, even though he realizes that the Capitol flags will be displayed at half mast for a month if he gives the Redskins the licking they haven't the faintest idea of taking.

In his quietly severe way, the doctor has demanded of Topping and gotten everything except one request. Sutherland wanted Nile Kinnick, of Iowa, and Topping went after him with the meatiest contract offered any player this year. But Kinnick decided to remain out of pro ball, in favor of a job as freshman coach under Eddie Anderson.

But Topping did pretty well at that. He got two other players out of the All-American backfield, George Cafego, of Tennessee, and Banks McFadden, of Clemson. With Ace Parker back in shape, as he soon will be, the Dodgers will renounce their role as doormat of the league. Parker probably will get into the game Sunday in Washington. He broke his ankle last May 11 sliding home in a Syracuse-Toronto game.

Topping has a good chance this year, at long last, to win the incurable patronage of Brooklyn fans. The Dodger Baseball Club, good or bad, is always supported. The Dodger football team has been something less than a gold mine, but Dan Parker's celebrated Mr. Dodgers, and his friends, haven't had much to cheer for except Ace. Unless all signs fail this is to be the first year of Dodger football affluence. One of the things that impressed Sutherland when he came into pro ball was that the blocking was mediocre, and if you know the doctor's kind of football you can appreciate how he was cut to the gizzard. He is the greatest fundamentalist in the game's history. His Dodgers show it.

Dundee Says Title Fight Will Go On

Promoter Mike Jacobs' moves to block the Henry Armstrong-Phil Furr welterweight championship battle in Griffith Stadium September 23 were discounted yesterday by Chris Dundee, manager of Furr, who came down from New York to inspect Furr's new training quarters.

Dundee expressed belief that the fight will go the full 15-round distance with the title at stake.

The shrewd New York manager who piloted Ken Overlin to the middlewight championship over Ceferino Garcia, said that he would not consider a nontitle fight with Armstrong.

Despite his optimism, it was reported here that Fat Eddie Mead, Armstrong's manager, still plans to appear before the District Boxing Commission here Monday to ask that the distance be cut from 15 to 12 rounds.

Armstrong will come to town tomorrow to establish training quarters in Turner's Arena. Hammering Hank expressed a yen for indoor facilities and will bring along a sparmate, Everett Rightmire, and his brother-trainer, Harry.

Furr will start work today at Meadowbrook Farms, just off the East-West highway. Conscious of the big opportunity his first championship fight offers him, the 29-year-old former soldier is working feverishly to get into top condition for the battle.

5 A. L. Clubs, 2 National in Series Meeting

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The American League, now in the midst of the closest flag race in its 40-year history, will hold a big "majority" over the National circuit at the annual World Series meeting tomorrow before Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball.

No fewer than five American League teams will be represented at the session—Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Boston and Chicago. Only two National League clubs were invited—the Cincinnati Reds, now leading the senior circuit race by a wide margin, and the second place Brooklyn Dodgers.

With the major league season closing September 29, the 1940 diamond classic likely will open Wednesday, October 2. Last year's series opened at Yankee Stadium, home field of the world championship New York Yankees, so this fall's spectacle will start on the home grounds of the National League pennant winner.

Should the Reds come through as expected, the first two games would be played at Crosley Field, Cincinnati, if custom is followed. The third, fourth and, if necessary, fifth games would be played at the park of the American League champion, with the sixth and seventh games, if necessary, swinging back to the National League park.

Within the next two weeks Commissioner Landis, with the cooperation of Presidents Will Harridge, of the American League, and Ford Frick, of the National circuit, must work out the many details surrounding the big show, including prices, time of games, and lists of players eligible to compete.

Lou Plummer Is Disqualified In Mat Match

Villain Slugs Referee, Bockwinkle Declared Winner

Lou Plummer played the part of the villain last night at Turner's Arena and was disqualified for his pains after slugging the referee, who promptly declared Warren Bockwinckle the winner of the weekly wrestling feature.

Lou was tossing Warren about in illegal fashion when Casey Berger hissed a warning into his ear. Lou then turned around and flailed away at Fearless Casey's cranium.

In the two-man team mayhem, Babe and Chris Zaharias won two straight falls and the match over Sheriff Tom Hanley and Henry Peers.

Frank Judson, former Harvard wrestling coach, and Tommy O'Toole fought to a draw, and Gino Garbaldi pinned Chief Chewacki in 24 minutes.

Colorful Duo Signed for Bike Races

German Pair to Appear at Riverside Septemeber 22

Probably the world's most colorful six-day bicycle racing team yesterday was signed to compete in the international six-day grind to be introduced at Riverside Stadium a week from Sunday night, September 22, at 9 o'clock.

Through special arrangement and after much dickering Promoter Ray Alvis yesterday announced that Heinz Vopel and Gustav Kilian, internationally celebrated German stars, had agreed to appear here.

Vopel and Kilian are unusual in that sentiment created by the current European war has in no way detracted from their amazing popularity. They are inseparable, both on and off the track, and agreed to appear here only after being assured they would compete as a team.

Redskins Drop Turner, Slagle in Final Roster Cut

Wilmington After Former G. W. Star

Blocking Back of 2 Years, Rookie May Join DuPont Club; Five Rookies Kept

By Al Hailey

The Redskin bosses said phooey to local interest in their club yesterday and released Jay Turner, former George Washington University football star, and Chuck Slagle, guard drafted from North Carolina, in the final bit of axe-swinging before the opening game with the Brooklyn Dodgers Sunday in Griffith stadium.

Turner, a hard-running, blocking back with a great love for the game, joined the Redskins three years ago and has been a valuable cog as a blocking back.

Along with Clem Stralka, guard from Georgetown University, Turner helped provide a large amount of the "local interest" sports promoters cry for.

May Go to Wilmington

The duPont-owned Wilmington club, of the Eastern League, has been after the services of Turner since he joined the Redskins, and negotiations toward that end were in progress last night. Slagle, who showed a lot of fire at guard, also may join the Wilmington club.

Waivers on the two will be up today and any other club in the National Professional League may claim them by merely handing over the $10 waiver price.

Their realese cuts the Redskin roster down to 33 players, the limit demanded by National League rules.

Turner Undecided

Turner, held back by injuries, is undecided as to whether to keep on playing pro ball. He reported to camp this year, however, insisting that his knee, operated on at the end of last season, was as good as ever. Unmarried, Jay is from Tulsa, Okla., but during the off-season worked for International Harvester in Spokane, Wash.

It was generally known that Owner George Marshall objected to Turner's hot temper on the gridiron, insisting that it cost the team too much lost yardage.

Warned to keep a curb on his temper at the start of last season, Turner kept himself well in hand. His operation was necessitated by a piece of torn cartilage, injured in mid season.

With the final squad cut past, the Redskins now have five rookie players in the 1940 line-up—Backs Ray Hare, Bob Hoffman, Bob Seymour and Roy Zimmerman, and Tackle Bob Fisher.

Hare and Hoffman are blocking backs from Gonzaga and Southern California, respectively; Seymour is from Oklahoma, a fullback; Zimmerman is a triple-threater from San Jose State, while Fisher is a product of Southern Cal and the Los Angeles Bulldogs.

Marion Miley, Miss Jameson Golf Victors

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Sept. 12.—Playing superbly through thunder, lightning and rain, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., advanced to the semi-finals of the Western Women's Amateur Women's Golf Tournament today with a 4 and 2 victory over Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif.

In other quarter-final matches, national champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, defeated Nancy Hurst, Portland, Oreg., 6 and 4; Mrs. J. K. Priebe, Seattle city champion, upset Mrs. Mary Mozel Wagner, Portland, 4 and 2, and Muriel Veatch, Longview, Wash., eliminated Beatrice Barrett, Minneapolis, 5 and 3.

Miss Miley meets Mrs. Priebe tomorrow and Miss Jameson faces Miss Veatch.

The Miley-Hicks match was packed with the day's links drama. Miss Hicks was trying to even the score for a 20-hole setback at the hands of Miss Miley in Florida last winter.

The hole that finally caused Miss Hicks' downfall was the 468-yard sixteenth. Her second shot failed to clear a water hazard. She doffed her shoes and socks, waded ankle-deep into the far edge of the water and swung in futile desperation. She ended up by dropping a ball on the far side—after wallowing out to knee depth—and finished with an eight.

Miss Miley, twice Western amateur champion, scored four birdies on the outgoing nine to go five up. She had dormie five at the fourteenth, but Miss Hicks took the fourteenth and fifteenth before running into her waterhole finish.

Miss Jameson was four up on her Oregon rival at the turn with a 38 card. She added to her advantage on the incoming nine as Miss Hurst was plagued with iron and putter trouble.

Initial honors in the opening events of the five-race series inaugurating the Penguin National Championship at Old Dominion Boat Club yesterday went to Forbes Morse, of Manhasset, N. Y., whose Puck captured both races and piled up 20.2 points. Three races will be run today to complete the series.

Tied for second place in the day's scoring were William W. Heintz's Judy and Phelps Hunt's Goblin, with 16 points each. Ralph A. Youngs, in Seabiscuit, was third with 14. Forbes sailed first in both events round the triangular 1½-mile course.

Hunt was second in the first, with Heintz third. In the second race, Walter Lawson's Potlatch was second, trailed by Heintz, running a consistent third.

The course sailed yesterday, in a wide harbor across the Potomac from Old Dominion, has been chosen by the Potomac River Sailing Association for the opening events in its fall series.

Chevy Chase Horse Show Sets 18 Classes

Event to Be Staged Opposite Meadowbrook Club Sunday

Eighteen classes are lined up for the Chevy Chase Horse Show, which will be held Sunday, September 22, on East-West highway, opposite the Meadowbrook Saddle Club.

Donald C. Bradley, president of the show committee, produced the prize list yesterday, revealing a lucrative set of events for ponies, hunters and jumpers.

Local exhibitors are expected to turn out en masse, as the show is the last fixture of the season in the immediate vicinity of the District.

In an effort to avoid the tedious waits caused by near-endless conformation judging, the Chevy Chase powers that be have arranged for all conformation to be judged at 12:30 p. m., prior to the regular show events. Then all entries will be scored on a percentage basis and the rating will be used during the afternoon.

Prospective exhibitors include Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Dunstar, A. R. Heinrich's Good Friday, Charles Fletcher's Nannette, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Dick Hutchison, jr.'s, Keelhaul and Othinasis, Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Black Caddy, Jackie Warren's Fairlawn, Sam Agnew's Kitty Vee, Blanche Johnson's Good Times, Eddie Talbert's He'll Try and Golden Glow, U. S. Blozis Makes Debut as Running Back as Hoya Gridders Engage in Bristling Scrimmage

Big Tackle Shows Plenty Power in Lugging Pigskin

A ball-running Al Blozis made an unexpected debut at the Hilltop yseterday as Georgetown University's football huskies bolted through a bruising scrimmage.

Blozis, a 240-pound tackle with plenty of drive, dropped back into the backfield on several occasions as a back dropped into the line and displayed the power of a full-fledged fullback while plunging with the ball.

Even Blozis' own teammates were taken by surprise, but not head coach Jack Hagerty.

"Al has phenomenal power and likes to run," Hagerty explained after the workout, "and don't be a bit surprised if we use him to carry the ball frequently this season.

"It's true that not many linemen run the ball nowadays, but it is likewise true that there are not many athletes like Blois. If he continues to impress, you may see a lot of him in this capacity."

Coach Hagerty Enthused Over Al's Ability

Jack Doolan, a lightning-fast sophomore; Frank Dornfeld, a sophomore triple threat who punts exceptionally well; Bill McLaughlin, pile-driving sophomore fullback, and Lou Ghecas, veteran halfback, were most impressive in the backfield, while Ross Sorce, big sophomore tackle; "Butch" Derringe, hard-hitting sophomore center, and the versatile Blozis looked good on the line.

Both Dornfield and Bill McLaughlin opened the eyes of spectators with their long and accurate punts prior to the scrimmage. Dornfield, a triple-threat halfback, is improving with every appearance and currently looms as one of the most valuable backs on the squad.

Squabble Wins Closing-Day Feature at Timonium Track

Florentine's Mare Scores Neck Victory

Mamie's Lad Runs Second With Doctor's Nurse Third; 8,000 Fans Witness Races

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium, Md., Sept. 12.—Squabble, a 5-year-old foaled by the mare Fracas, showed a lot of stretch fight today and was rewarded with a neck victory in the final feature race of the half-mile season. Racing for H. Florentine and ridden by R. D. Scott, Squabble came with a closing rush that sent Mrs. Arthur White's Mamie's Lad into second money at the end of the test of a mile and a sixteenth. Doctor's Nurse, owned by Mrs. C. B. Inscoe, was third.

Squabble made it four victories in 17 tries this seasoan and brought her year's earnings to $2,430, a tidy sum. She was clocked over the fast track in a good 1:51 4-5.

The best season in the history of the smaller tracks in this State came to a close with some 8,000 taking part in the sport. This was a holiday in Baltimore—Defenders Day—and the banks were closed. There was plenty of money at the track, however.

Jockeys Escape Injuries

Three jockeys escaped serious injury in a spill that marked the running of the sixth race. R. D. Scott, R. Sisto and A. Vesseli were the riders who went down with their horses at the paddock turn of the 6½-furlong race. The trio walked back to the jockeys' quarters. Vessell's head was bruised.

Prince Turley, with Scott aboard, was first to go down. Pirate Ship, with Vesseli up, stumbled and fell over Prince Turley, and Jacquelin High, ridden by Sisto, piled into the others.

Prince Turley was the only horse to be injured, suffering a broken shoulder. Owner H. M. Simpson, of Washington, had the horse taken back to his stall in the horse ambulance and hoped to save him.

Din Captures Event

C. M. Feltner's Din won the event by three parts of a length from Balkenese of the favored Moyer-George entry. Quick Vine was third. Din paid a $10.70 mutuel.

A heavily played horse and a long shot figured in a $170 pay-off in the daily double. Miss Soot took the opener at a $5.20 mutuel and Bud's King turned a form flip-flop to take the second at a $49.80 mutuel.

Trainer Don Yates reached the winner's circle in the day's steeplechase when he saddled Playdema and Jockey Norman Brooks galloped her to an easy victory. Quaker State and Perfect Liar were closest at the end of the 2-mile test.

Selections at Aqueduct.

Dear Al:

One of the Nation's best known and most successful owner-trainer combinations has ended with the split of W. L. Brann and Lou Schaefer. The owner of Challedon and the former jockey who developed the great horse are definitely through. Schaefer is said to have resigned. I like them both and I hope their differences, if any, can be patched up. Each needs the other, in my book. Jockey Mannie Berg, who graduated from the half-milers to become a capable mile performer, came down for the Frank Garrett funeral and visited the track yesterday. He was first-string rider for Garrett. He goes back to New York today and tomorrow will pilot Jay Jay and Cavalier at Havre de Grace. Jockey Sammy Palumbo came down from New York but did not ride. Jockey A. F. Martinez is going to the Graw to ride free lance. The Cuban once was a star performer for the Denemark Stable but suffered a serious accident. He came to Charles Town, taking a chance on getting mounts so he could eat. He made the grade during the summer and I believe he will do a good job if he can get some horses to ride on the big time. I sneaked in the Capitol the other night to see Art Brown. Confidentially, he's a bad horse player. Well, the half-milers season is over. We get a chance to catch up on our knitting today and then travel to Havre de Grace tomorrow. In the meanwhile, I'm taking a long-distance shot at Aqueduct. See you on the rail—tomorrow. Ralph Murdock is taking me fishing tonight. BILL.

First race—Carlaton appears the best of those gathered for the day's opener. May take command and never look back. Dingmans is a fair sort and should be prominent. Pupport is bred for speed.

Second race—Iskie has shown enough to warrant a top selection in a field of this sort. Likes the route and is fit according to the works. Noble Count and Dark May figure close to the top one and should be in the pay circle.

Third race—Airflame seems to have the edge on these good sprinters. Needs only the right ride. King Pharamond is in good condition and the dope says he will be prominent. Michigan Flyer for the show end.

Fourth race—Torch Gleam and Moon Folly are a close fit in this field and I prefer them in the order named. Woodberry has races that would put him mighty close to the top pair.

Fifth race—Little Risk has been showing good form and is not too ambitiously placed in this company. Looks like the right one in a rather open affair. True Call and Piquet probably will find their way into the pay.

Sixth race—Seven Hills has high speed figure and likes this distance. Appears to be headed for a set of brackets, providing he gets a share of the racing luck. Spring Wood and Wild Breast to take care of the others.

Seventh race—True Knightess could be the right one in the day's finale. The company seems right. Close To and Mae Chance are most likely to cause trouble, if such develops.

Best bet—Iskie.

Cincinnati Wins Easily Over N. Y.

Thompson Holds 9-0 Lead Until Ninth When Late Rally Nets 4 Runs

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 12.—The Cincinnati Reds, cruising smoothly toward another National League pennant, overpowered the New York Giants, 9 to 4, today and eliminated them, mathematically, from the championship contention.

Gene Thompson pitched shutout ball for the first eight innings and managed to outlast a New York rally in the ninth when the Giants scored all their runs on five hits, one of them Mel Ott's fifteenth home run of the year. It was Thompson's fifteenth triumph and fifth over the Giants.

Jim Ripple, a former Terryman, led the Reds' 13-hit assault on Bill Lohrman and Rookie Bob Carpenter, getting two doubles and a single for a perfect day at bat. He also walked twice and drove in three runs.

The outcome left the Giants 21 games behind the Reds with 19 contests to play.

Needy Families to Be Well-Fed This Winter, Says SCC Head

SURPLUS VEGETABLES FOR NEEDY—A truckload of tomatoes, carrots and beets that arrived yesterday from Bustleton, Pa., is unloaded at District Commodities Corporation, 460 C street northwest

Large Supply of Federal Surplus Food Now on Hand and More to Come; 40,000 In District Received Aid Last Year

Needy families of the District who look toward the Surplus Commodities Corporation for a goodly portion of their daily dietary requirements will be well supplied this winter.

David Miller, head of the local distribution of the commodities corporation, said yesterday he now has a large supply of food and the prospects for the winter are excellent.

Last year, some 40,000 persons, representing about 12,000 families received 1,189,000 pounds of food, ranging from eggs to Valencia oranges from California. Miller said even more will be distributed this year.

On hand now for distribution, he said, are Irish potatoes, rice, canned peaches, California pears, string beans, fresh plums from the State of Washington, oranges, prunes, flour, corn meal and many other commodities.

The food is all No. 1 in quality. No "seconds" here, he said.

Eligibles for the surplus food are all persons on the public assistance rolls; those certified for WPA jobs, but who have not been assigned to work; some who work on WPA jobs but whose pay is in the lower brackets, and "borderline" cases referred to the Board of Public Welfare by private social agencies.

News of Birth of Son Given Hitter at Plate

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (AP).—Just as Lou Novikoff, Los Angeles outfielder and leading batter of the Pacific Coast League, came to bat in the fourth inning last night, the loud speaker blared that his wife had given birth to a daughter.

The fans cheered, and "Pop" Novikoff responded with a line single to left. He will report to the Chicago Cubs next season.

Ward, Defending Champion, Loses in U. S. Amateur Play

25. McCullough, 32-year-old former State champion from Abingdon, Pa., near Philadelphia, will be his opponent tomorrow. Billows, the Cinderella Kid of New York golf, will meet the 29-year-old Chapman, a member of several New York clubs and former French amateur titlist.

Billows appears to be the one destined for the title. In the first round he dropped a 10-foot putt on the eighth to square a match with William Dear, and won it on the twenty-third, or fifth extra hole. After winning easily in the second round, he was 2 down at the twelfth to Harry Haverstick, Lancaster, Pa., former State titlist, and won on the nineteenth. Then he met Ward, the biggest favorite in years, and won all the way, taking a 4-up lead in the first six holes.

The biggest gallery of the day and of the tournament trailed the Billows-Ward match and sensed an upset on the very first hole when Ward was in trouble all the way to the cup and Billows played it perfectly. Straying iron shots cost Ward the third and sixth to pars, while Billows dropped a short one on the fifth for a birdie and a win. Ward cut the lead on the eighth when Billows was in trouble but Ray came right back on nine with a birdie, a near eagle and turned four up. They split even on the back nine.

McCullough, who looks a great deal like Dutch Leonard, the Washington hurler, lost the first two holes to Turnesa in the first round but three threes in the next four holes squared the match, two of them pars. He was even par as he won the sixteenth, 3 and 2. Against Fischer McCullough lost only one hole, the sixth when he went over with a five.

Tigers Defeat Yankees, 6-3, To Hold Lead

Gordon's Bad Throw Prelude To Rally in Eighth

Breuer with a perfect bunt and the fourth run of the inning scored.

Joe DiMaggio had kept the Yankees in the ball game. He wiped out a 1-to-0 lead of the Tigers in the first inning with a long triple to centerfield wall that scored Rolfe and Selkirk, who had singled with two out.

Hank Greenberg was a sixth-inning hero for the Tigers. With Donald showing no signs of relinquishing his 2-1 lead and the Tigers scoreless for four innings, Greenberg tied the game at 2 to 2 with his thirty-second homer, a drive into the upper left center bleachers.

Yanks Take Lead

In the seventh, the Yanks took a 3-to-2 lead when Rolfe led off with a single and scored from second on Keller's single to right.

But the Yankees were treating Donald shabbily, nevertheless. They muffed continual scoring chances. They slugged Rowe for 11 hits, to the 9 allowed by Donald, but they left 11 runners on base. The aging Schoolboy turned 'em back scoreless in the second after they had runners on first and third with one out, and with two on and none out in the fourth, he was just as invincible. He was winning his fourteenth game of the season against three defeats.

French Beats Phils, 5 to 1, For Chicago

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—Southpaw Larry French set the Phils down with five hits today as the National League tailenders dropped a 5-to-1 decision to the Chicago Cubs.

It was French's thirteenth victory of the season and the Phils' fourth consecutive loss.

The Cubs got to Si Johnson in the first inning for a pair of runs on Billy Herman's double and singles by Bill Nicholson and Zeke Bonura. Nicholson opened the third with a home run and the Cubs chased Johnson to the showers and two more runs in before the inning ended.

Clyde Smoll, who relieved Johnson, gave the Phils their only run. He singled in the sixth and arrived home on Marty's one-bagger to center.

Danny Litwhiler, Phillie rookie outfielder, extended his hitting streak to 14 straight games with a single in the sixth.

combination, helped Anderson through the tight spots. Anderson encountered most of his trouble with Vernon Kennedy and Walter Judnich. They came through with two hits apiece to lead the Browns' hitting. Judnich getting the only extra base hit off the rookie when he doubled in the run-producing fourth. Joe Grace and Bob Swift came up with the other blows.

Jake Early, nominated for the catching duty, was the only Senator who failed to get at least one hit. Sanford, of course, paced the attack with three while Walker, Travis and Anderson came through with two each.

The victory enabled the Senators to increase their sixth-place margin over the Browns to three and one-half games.

Friday, Bucky Harris will send Sid Hudson, the sensational rookie after his sixteenth victory of the season while Fred Haney named Bill Trotter, another right-hander for St. Louis duty.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Nats' rookies Arnold Anderson and Jack Sanford ran off with the major share of points in the Man of the Month contest as a result of their part in yesterday's 7-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

To Anderson, five points because in pitching 6-hit ball he didn't allow a single Brown runner to pass first base except for the fourth inning in which the Brown runs scored and because he came through with two hits himself.

To First Baseman Jack Sanford five points because he led the hitting attack with a triple, double and single, scored two runs himself, drove in three, and then took part in a double play.

To Gerry Walker, three points because his triple and double accounted for two runs.

To Cecil Travis, two points because in three times at bat he hit safely twice and made each hit account for a run.

To Jimmy Pofahl and Jimmy Bloodworth, one point each, because they participated in a timely double play and were instrumental in three Nat runs.

Exchange Markets

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Portuguese escudo closed at 4.01 cents in terms of the dollar in today's foreign exchange market, a new high for the year. This was a rise of .01 of a cent over the preceding day's closing price.

Traders said expanding import-export shipping between this country and Portugal had widened demand for the escudo in settlement of trade balances. Since most of the rest of Europe went to war, Portugal has attained increasing importance as a gateway for transshipment of goods to continental nations.

The Canadian dollar closed ¼-cent lower at 89¾ U. S. cents. The Swiss franc was off .00½ of a cent. The British pound was unchanged.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents).

Official Canadian control board rates for U. S. dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The cotton market settled back in a watch-and-wait attitude today with prices easily influenced one way or another by small orders. Closing prices were 1 point higher to 1 lower. Trade interests were represented as being desirous of awaiting a test of prices when the new crop begins to move and therefore held close to sideline positions. Most of the day's business was accounted for by Southern hedge selling and trade price-fixing. Weather conditions in the main belt were held by trading experts to be favorable for picking and ginning operations, but the market apparently ignored such factors. Instead, main interest veered to Europe and the war and to Worth street, where cotton goods trade was again light, but recently hiked-up prices generally held. No exports Wednesday; season so far, 80,732 bales; port receipts, 14,340. Port stocks, 2,674,459.

New Whey

Wine Now Is Made Of Cheese Waste

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The prospect that the dairy industry may get into the wine business and thus find a use for millions of pounds of whey left over from cheese manufacture, which now goes to waste, was disclosed today by National Dairy Products Corporation.

Sherry and sauterne type wines have thus far been made.

The process was discovered by accident in the company's Baltimore laboratories and experimentation was carried out by Dr. E. V. McCollum, head of the Baltimore Sealtest Laboratory, and Dr. Robert P. Myers, of the staff.

The new wine contains 15 per cent of alcohol by volume. With the addition of yeast and sugar, a quart of whey will make a quart of wine.

Bank Reserves Up $50,000,000 During Week

Seasonal Decrease In Cash Circulation Reported by Board

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that lendable excess reserves of bank increased $50,000,000 to $6,540,000,000 in the week ended September 11.

The increase was due to a seasonal decline in money in circulation, Treasury spending, and Treasury purchases of gold.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended September 11, member bank reserve balances increased $72,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $12,000,000 in money in circulation, $29,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, and $5,000,000 in Treasury cash, and increases of $37,000,000 in gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by a decrease of $5,000,000 in reserve bank credit and an increase of $9,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on September 11 were estimated to be approximately $6,540,000,000, an increase of $50,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended September 11, 1940, were reported as follows:

Building Permits Off in 215 Cities

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Building permits issued in August fell moderately below the previous month and slightly under the same month a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today.

The decline from August, 1939, was traceable directly to a sharp drop in New York City permits. Excluding New York City, permit valuations were 11.1 per cent greater than a year ago.

Permit valuations for 215 cities of the United States amounted to 116,081,257 in August, compared with $124,497,826 in July and $117,832,387 in the corresponding month last year.

Excluding New York City, permits totaled 102,041,366, against $111,942,640 the previous month and $91,808,291 a year ago.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday an increase of 0.4 per cent in its wholesale commodity price index for the week ended September 7.

The change raised the index to 78 per cent of the 1926 average, and was attributed to general advances in wholesale prices for grain, cattle feed, livestock, lumber and wool.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $285,000,000. The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Sept. 12.—Softness of the stock market this week, following a week in which there was a reawakening of speculative enthusiasm and general strength in security and commodity values, has been due entirely to the uncertainties of the war. Weakness today and on Wednesday reflected particularly the speech of Prime Minister Churchill, with his prediction that the expected German invasion would be launched shortly.

Only the war can account for the current selling, for on the political front there has been no vital change in the last few days since the Republican sweep in Maine on Monday, and in the field of domestic industrial and business news the advantage has been decidedly with the bullish forces.

All groups of stocks joined in the lower drift today and the composite average of the entire list recorded a net loss of 0.41 point. Trading was not particularly active, however, amounting to 403,130 shares. The relatively small volume on the recent reaction has been regarded by many in the street as indicating that investors are not definitely bearish, but that they are inclined to be long of cash rather than securities in the next few days when the greatest test of England's defensive powers will be staged.

Declines in individual speculative leaders were fractional in most cases. Bethlehem Steel lost 1⅜ points, being the only member of the group of fifteen most active stocks that closed more than a point from Wednesday's final price. Telephone was off 1¼. Standard of New Jersey, 1⅛ and Nickel a point. Allied Chemical, in the higher brackets, gave up 3 points and Johns-Manville 3⅛ in dull trading. Union Pacific was down 2½ and United Aircraft a point. Other well-known issues generally held within a narrow margin.

The day's financial news brought further evidence of the healthy pace maintained by business. Carloadings, although showing the expected decrease for a week which contained a legal holiday, were up 5 per cent compared with a year ago and 22.3 per cent compared with two years ago. Due to Labor Day, the total was down 9.6 per cent as compared with the previous week.

Current earning and dividend statements did their best for the bullish forces. Declaration of a $3-a-share payment on account of accumulations on the 7 per cent second preferred of Associated Dry Goods brought a 6-point jump to this issue. Federated Department Stores, Inc., reported a good increase in earnings for the twelve months ended July 31 and in most other cases the earnings statements coming to hand showed improvement over like 1939 periods.

Expansion plans, announced by a number of companies in order to take care of Government orders being let in connection with the defense program, went unheeded by the stock market in today's trading.

United States Steel was the most active stock in today's trading and it was the steel group that was most prominent on the decline. Central held firm. Curtiss Wright and Boeing were the leaders in the aviation division, the latter selling off a half point. Chrysler and General Motors gave up fractions. There was some profit taking in the paper division and United States Rubber, General Electric and Anaconda were down.

Listed bonds were under mild pressure today, in a dull market that produced only $4,270,000 par value of business. Foreign dollar issues were somewhat weaker than the domestic variety, owing to the steady intensification of the war. Speculative domestic bonds tended to follow equities to lower levels, although some exceptions were apparent. United States Treasury and best grade corporate issues held at or close to previous levels.

Wheat Points Upward After Early Decline

Futures Show Slight Recessions at Close; War Turn Waited

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Wheat prices dropped more than a cent but then recovered half the loss today as the market drifted through another session of watchful waiting for signs of a definite turn in the battle of Britain.

Most of the selling was inspired by weakness of securities, which traders watched closely for hints of sentiment in financial circles. Scattered purchases that helped to rally the market at times were credited to milling and consuming interests but on the whole trade was restricted by general uncertainty.

Wheat closed ⅜@¾ lower than yesterday, September 74¾, December 76¼@76¼; corn, ½ lower to ¼ higher, September 63½, December 56¾@¼,56¾; oats, ⅛ off; rye, ¼@½ down and lard, 8@13 lower.

September corn advanced ⅜ cent at times and closed ¼ net higher reflecting shipping sales totaling 64,000 bushels and steady spot prices. New crop deliveries, however, declined in sympathy with wheat although they derived some support from reports of frost in parts of the belt. Minneapolis advices told of heavy frost which experts said may have damaged late corn and dealers expressed belief the bulk of the crop will not be beyond frost danger for two or three weeks or even more in some cases.

Otherg rains weakened with wheat while lard reflected hog price declines. Although U. S. lard stocks decreased during August, the total on September 1 was 272,000,000 pounds, 162,000,000 larger than a year ago and 171,000,000 greater than the five-year average for the date.

Clearings Remain Under 1939 Total

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Bank clearings in the week ended September 11 rose appreciably over the preceding holiday week, but for the fifth successive week fell far behind last year due to heavy shrinkage at New York, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The total for 23 cities was $4,831,568,000, a drop of 21.6 per cent from $6,165,900,000 in the comparable 1939 period, but $838,066,000 ahead of the previous week.

Transactions at New York totaled $2,623,864,000, a decrease of 33.1 per cent from last year's $3,923,498,000. The aggregate at the other 22 cities was $2,207,704,000, or 1.5 per cent under the 1939 figures.

4:30 P. M., WJSV—Gen. Pershing is saluted on his eightieth birthday.
6:30, WRC—Alec Templeton: "Impressions of an Outdoor Concert."
7:15, WOL—Representative Joseph W. Martin, chairman of the Republican National Committee, subs for News Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., thus relieving injured Republican feeling after the donkey's Ed Flynn held the fort Tuesday evening.
7:30, WJSV—Alfred G. Vanderbilt, upon whose colors many a fortune has been won and lost, joins Leo Durocher, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, on that likable sports quiz, "Choose Up Sides."
8, WJSV—Of course, it's Friday the thirteenth and, of course, we get a mystery chiller, Max Marcin's "Death Takes Over," a perfect crime for Johnny Presents.
8:30, WOL—Alison Skipworth returns for a command performance to present a protege she discovered in a Michigan summer theater, one Dean Harens. They'll play an aged mother and her dullard son in "The Rock."
9, WJSV—So Ripley, too, chooses Friday the thirteenth for his seasonal bow. With him he brings: a doctor who has carried on his practice for 26 years though totally blind; four Norwegians who crossed the Atlantic in a sailboat to escape A. H.; a man who was steered through an Arctic storm by the vision of his dead father-in-law and found a gold mine where he landed.
9:45, WOL—Representative John G. Alexander, of Minnesota, speaks: "Caught in the Draft."
10:30, WRC—Hawaii salutes the United States Antarctic Expedition under the auspices of the Honolulu Advertiser.

It's quite obvious that Bob Ripley isn't superstitious.
Here it is Friday, the thirteenth, and Mr. Ripley is flouting all theatrical tradition not only by opening his new radio show over C. B. S.—from 9 to 9:30 over WJSV—but by deliberately doing all manner of other things calculated to send apprehensive shudders down the spines of persons not as profane as he about bad luck omens.
Bob is going to have a ladder placed before the stage entrance of the studio so that all participants in the show will have to pass under it—except, of course, for those crass cowards who will try to sneak in the front way. For another obvious thing, he's importing a black cat and is going to have it running madly about the stage, crossing everyone's path as often as possible, all during rehearsal.
He has many other such dreadful things in mind to show that he doesn't give a rap about jinxes—but I guess you get the idea. If anything goes wrong, he, being a stubborn guy, probably will blame it on the weather.
A feature of the broadcast itself will be the dramatizations of several "Believe It or Nots" about the Friday, the 13th, superstition which have been gathered especially for the portentous date.
In addition to the group of guests who will illustrate hard-to-believe stories, the broadcasts as of last season will have B. A. Rolfe's Orchestra, with Linda Lee as the singing star.

Physical Ills Help Scores To Good Jobs

Total of 499 Aided By Rehabilitation Program in 4 Years

Physical handicaps are reported to have proved blessings in disguise to a large proportion of 499 Washingtonians helped during the past four years by the WPA vocational rehabilitation service, sponsored by the United States Office of Education. This number fo cases has been "closed" during that period, with the individuals restored to usefulness and supporting themselves and their families.

Herbert A. Stover, supervisor of the project, says many men have gone to jobs at the end of their training that were better than those they had before the accident or illness that temporarily incapacitated them.

The project will accept anyone with a physical disability which is a vocational handicap, and train him in whatever work is feasible for him to undertake in view of his background, previous education and disability.

In addition to those completely rehabilitated, 325 others have been placed in jobs where they are already partly self-sustaining, and 229 are in training.

The District appropriates $25,000 for this service which is matched by funds in the same amount available under the Federal Security Agency. Five workers on the regular staff, paid by the Office of Education, are supplemented by WPA instructors.

The project is set up to take care of substandard cases that cannot be trained under the regular rehabilitation service of the Office of Education. The latter requires that the trainee must be able to maintain himself during the training period and to take a job as soon as training is ended.

The WPA service has the cooperation of the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare and the Family Service Association in providing aid during the training, with the assurance the individual will be self-supporting when it is completed. Whenever possible, part of the training is given on the job, in a firm willing to cooperate by taking the worker as a trainee. A tuition fee is paid to the employer, part of which he usually turns back to the worker in wages.

One man, trained this way and now a technician drawing a good salary with a local radio firm, was a timekeeper on a construction job before the injury that resulted in his need for rehabilitation. As a child he suffered from infantile paralysis, his left arm was useless and his left leg affected. An injury on the construction job resulted in epileptic seizures and impaired speech.

His family was on relief and he was given eight months' hospitalization by the Rehabilitation Service before his training could start. Now the family is in comfortable circumstances and has just bought a new car for cash.

Other cases with happy endings are on the records of the service, according to Stover. There are 18,000 job classifications that handicapped persons can fill, when trained, as welll as can the able-bodied, he says.

The service has provided 732 artificial appliances,—an arm or a leg, or both, or a hearing aid—and is training the disabled in everything from medicine to shoe repairing.

The blind, of whom there are 550, learn handicrafts and Braille proofreading. Some are now employed in the latter at the Library of Congress and at the Library for the Blind.

Woman Takes Honors in Md. Bar Exams

MRS. TROY L. WALDROP

Mrs. Troy L. Waldrop's telephone rang all day yesterday as friends called to congratulate her on making the highest grade in the Maryland bar examinations.

"It's so thrilling," she exclaimed. "I can hardly believe it's true. Am I going to practice? Well, I hadn't thought about it, but this is so encouraging, I may, some day."

Right now, Mrs. Waldrop, who is 34, has a pretty sizable job taking care of her two children and her home at 255 Wheaton road, Silver Spring, Md. Her husband owns a restaurant in Silver Spring.

Never Went to Law School

"I have really been doing too much," she said, "but it has been so much fun. I'm fascinated with law."

Mrs. Waldrop started studying law not exactly as a hobby, but because she wanted something to do that would be educational and interesting. She never attended a law school, but for the past three years has been a sort of law clerk in the office of J. C. Cissel, Silver Spring attorney and friend of the Waldrop's.

Reads Law—"Just for Fun"

Mrs. Waldrop likes to pick up a law book and read—just for fun. The study of real property, bugaboo of many students, holds no terror for her.

A total of 263 candidates took the State bar examination on June 24 and 25 and only 76 passed. Three of the successful candidates were women.

Other residents of nearby Maryland who passed the test were Jesse F. Nicholson, Bethesda; Winton Woods, Berwyn; Floyd B. Mathias, Mount Rainier, and Samuel W. H. Meloy, Upper Marlboro.

Military Burial For Lieut. Clarke

Funeral services for First Lieut. William D. Clarke, U. S. A., retired, who died Sunday at Surry Courthouse, Va., will be held at 10:30 a. m. today with military honors at the grave in Section 6, Arlington National Cemetery.

Lieut. Clarke was born in Virginia on September 22, 1892. He served in the Regular Army from November, 1920, to August 31, 1933, when he was retired. He served in the World War as a second lieutenant in the air service.

Contract Bridge

Today's hand from expert Randall's notebook was bid to a dizzy grand-slam contract in a duplicate game of 1929. Today no match point player would make a grand slam declaration unless he were certain of winning 13 tricks—and had one in his pocket for good measure.

The Vanderbit club call, perhaps the earliest forcing or cue bid of the game, developed by contract's chief patron, Harold S. Vanderbilt, was used by Randall's 1929 duplicate artists. The Vanderbilt club is still popular among social players and perhaps has undergone fewer changes than any similar bid. But it is not the opening call or the response but the subsequent bidding which makes today's hand amusing to 1940 bidders.

"The funny part is that the hand will make seven clubs if the spade finesse is guessed correctly," writes Randall. "You have three spades, one heart, five diamonds, four clubs. Or you can also make seven no trump.

"History does not record the result. If declarer made his seven clubs, it should be honored as one of the pioneer blitzkriegs."

Seven clubs, seven diamonds or seven no trump can be made also by a Vienna coup, without a finesse. South leads out his ace of hearts, and dummy's long diamonds and club squeeze West in spades and hearts.

Harriman Funeral Rites to Be Held In New York Today

Funeral services for Borden Harriman, member of the famous railroad and banking family, who plunged to his death Wednesday from his eighth-floor room in the Philadelphia Central Y. M. C. A., will be held today at the family burial plot in White Plains, N. Y.

Besides his mother, Mrs. Grace Harriman, of New York City, and his brother, John, also of New York City, he leaves a brother, Carley Harriman, of Hollywood, Calif. The father, who died last month, was a brother-in-law of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who recently returned from her post as United States Minister to Norway.

The plunge victim was fairly well known in theatrical circles. He made his first stage appearance in 1923, in a stock company in Fall River, Mass., and has since appeared in several New York plays and has had roles in several film productions.

Among the New York plays in which Harriman appeared were "Don't Bother Mother," with Nance O'Neil; in "Stronger Than Love," and with Doris Keane in "Starlight." He also appeared in the London production of "Romance" in support of Miss Keane.

Beard Prefers 'Solitary' After Return From Jail

Whereabouts of Washington's ex-czar of gambling, Sam Beard, back home after a four-year-five-month stretch in Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, were closely guarded yesterday by the only persons who seemed to know where he is staying—his attorneys.

"He's in good health and in safekeeping," said the race-betting tycoon's attorney, James J. Laughlin, who said he had been getting phone calls from Beard since his arrival Wednesday.

Except for losing 80 of his former 260 pounds Beard was none the worse for his prison ordeal, but would like a good rest, according to Laughlin. He denied Beard and his wife are accompanied by bodyguards.

Allegany Parents Confer on Ouster For School Head

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 12 (AP).—A committee of citizens representing Midland, Mount Savage, Carlos, Midlothian, Lord and other small communities in Allegany County met tonight to discuss a proposed petition to Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools, asking the removal of Charles L. Kopp as superintendent of Allegany County schools.

This committee was named at a meeting in Midland last night after Desales Maher, of Midland, proposed that Dr. Cook be asked to remove Kopp. Maher was one of the speakers at a mass meeting protesting the county school consolidation program.

Many parents agreed to keep their children out of school and to carry an appeal to the State superintendent. Hundreds of school children remained away from classes again today as the "strike" or protest demonstration continued.

Parents are objecting to the Allegany County Board of Education closing schools in smaller communities and transporting students to school in Frostburg.
